'Unknown' planning appointee

'Unknown' is elected to planning post

Councilmen ratify mayor's choice although most have never met him

A RETIRED manufacturing executive, who most councilmen do not know, was appointed to the Carmel Planning Commission on Monday. Mayor Gunnar Norberg nominated Arthur R. Mertens and the council ratified his appointment on a 4-1 vote.

"How many councilmen here have ever met Mr. Mertens?" asked Councilman David Hughes, the lone dissenter. Two of them, Mike Brown and Helen Arnold, admitted they too did not know Mertens, but they voted to ratify his appointment anyway.

The councilmen also approved the reappointment of Eileen Thompson, who has served for two years on the commission.

Mertens, 64, did not attend the meeting. He was in Yosemite National Park and attempts to reach him at the Ahwahnee Lodge, where he was a registered guest, were unsuccessful on Tuesday.

Norberg said at the meeting that a number of persons had recommended Mertens for the post, but only a few could supply details about his background. After the meeting, Norberg praised Mertens saying, "Any individual of goodwill and good integrity can apply those qualities to the city's planning problems." He admitted that Mertens had no municipal planning experience, but Norberg said his overriding concern was that commissioners "save Carmel for posterity."

BOTH MERTENS and Mrs. Thompson will serve four-year terms. Norberg did not reappoint Dorothea Roberts, the chairman of the commission. Her term expires later this month. She has been on the commission for 11 years. In March, she was defeated in a bid for a seat on the City Council.

Brown, one of her opponents in the race, asked for a letter of appreciation for Mrs. Roberts and said, "There is an empty feeling in my stomach when I think about Dorothea leaving the commission."

Norberg refused to comment about passing over her name. "Let's just say I made a new appointment," the mayor said following the meeting.

Only Norberg and Councilman Howard Brunn indicated they had met Mertens. Said Brunn, "I have not met Mr. Mertens in connection with this appointment, but I do know him and he is a willing and intelligent man." Brunn made the motion, seconded by Mrs. Arnold, to confirm Norberg's appointment of Mertens and Mrs. Thompson.

Before voting, Hughes said, "I haven't heard his name until tonight, which is normal. I'm sorry. I have to vote no." Hughes indicated he was not voting against Mrs. Thompson.

MERTENS WAS the founder of Pacific Aerosol Inc., a paint packaging firm started in 1961 in Hayward with three employees. The company later expanded and moved to San Leandro, another industrial city in Alameda County.

Kelly-Moore Paint Co. acquired the firm in March 1976 and Mertens retired. The acquisition price was not disclosed. It is a wholly owned subsidiary of Kelly-Moore.

Mertens and his wife Joan lived in San Mateo before moving to Carmel two years ago.

One of the persons who recommended him for the planning post, Arthur Strasburger Jr., said Mertens had attended meetings of the Old Carmel residents lobby and was active in the March City Council campaign. Strasburger, the chairman of the lobby, said Mertens owned property in Carmel before he moved here.

Leslie Gross, a planning commissioner who also recommended Mertens to the mayor, could supply little additional information.

Mertens and Mrs. Thompson will be sworn into office on Wednesday, May 24 when the commission meets at City Hall. Its members also are scheduled to elect a new chairman.

Mrs. Thompson originally was appointed in December 1976 by Norberg. She has filled the unexpired term of Robert Evans. Evans left the commission when Norberg appointed him to the board of directors of Harrison Memorial Library.

Hearing on site limits

Biggest comercial area up for rezoning next week

CARMEL'S LARGEST commercial zone soon could have its building site size limits cut 25 to 75 per cent. The reduction would prevent motel development there.

The city's 22-acre service commercial district zone (C-1-S) is the next area scheduled to have its building site size limits reviewed.

The district is generally adjacent to the central commercial district (C-1-C). It is rectangular-shaped, with the C-1-C zone in its center. Its borders roughly follow Third and Eighth Avenues, running north and south, and Junipero and Monte Verde, running east and west.

A public hearing on the proposal is scheduled Wednesday at 4 p.m. before the Carmel Planning Commission. There are 138 property owners who would be affected by the change.

IN MARCH, the City Council voted to cut in half the allowable building site sizes in the C-1-C district. The new 8,000-square-foot limit took effect April 13.

Severe limits could effectively prevent any motel development in the area that surrounds the village center.

Motels require larger sites than most other commercial establishments. Most Carmel motels are on 11,000- to 33,000-square-foot parcels.

Some 138 owners would be affected

Carmel presently has 34 hotels in its commercial district and 14 more in the outlying residential areas.

The city is considering a separate rezoning issue that could restrict motel growth, too. On June 5, the Carmel City Council has scheduled a public hearing to rezone a six-block area on Junipero between Third and Sixth. New motels would be restricted from parcels it rezones limited residential (R-4).

THE MAXIMUM building site size in the C-1-S zone is now 32,000 square feet. That is approximately twice the size of the Northern California Savings and Loan Association building site on Dolores and Seventh.

The planning commission voted 4-2 on April 26 to accept a land use committee report that recommended a 20,000-square-foot building site size in the C-1-S zone.

The committee investigated limits ranging from 8,000 square feet to the present 32,000 square feet.

The land use committee is a planning commission subcommittee. Its members are Chairman Dorothea Roberts, Dr. Donald Davidson and Eileen Thompson.

The committee report concurred with a study completed by Planning Director Bob Griggs in January which said the 8,000-square-foot limit would be unfair.

"An 8,000-square-foot limit would impose hardships on approximately 50 per cent of the land already developed within this zone," the report said. All of those parcels would become nonconforming. That status means, if the buildings were ever destroyed, they could only be rebuilt under the new standards.

Parcels within the C-1-S district that would exceed the 8,000-square-foot limit include Shell-by-the-Sea, Bruno's Food Center, the Church of the Wayfarer and the Adobe Inn.

Carmel City Hall itself is on a 12,000-square-foot site and would become nonconforming under the 8,000-square-foot maximum.

Buildings that would exceed the recommended 20,000-square-foot limit include the Dolphin Inn and Marquis Restaurant, the Sands Motel and Simpson's Restaurant and the Crocker Bank.

The Carmel Plaza is located on an 80,000-square-foot building site and already is nonconforming.

THERE ARE 18 blocks in the commercial C-1-S district. But the average building site size there is just under 8,000 square feet, according to the planning director's study.

There are 71 sites with fewer than 8,000 square feet and 74 with 8,000 square feet or more, according to Griggs.

When the commission first discussed the site size reduction in March, Commissioner Robert Stephenson asked, "If an 8,000-square-foot limit is good for the center of town, then why shouldn't we apply it to the C-1-S zone?"

Davidson said the central commercial district has "wall to wall shops." That would be "undesirable" for the C-1-S zone, he said.

Allowances for parking and landscaping expansion should be granted if a site limitation of less than 20,000 square feet is imposed, Griggs said last week.

The new Monterey Savings building, scheduled for construction in August, is an example of such an allowance, Griggs explained. Although the building actually will be on a 12,000-square-foot site, the planning commission conditionally approved two separate sites; a 4,000-square-foot parking lot and an 8,000-square-foot building site.

The structure will be located in the central business district where building site size is limited to 8,000 square feet.

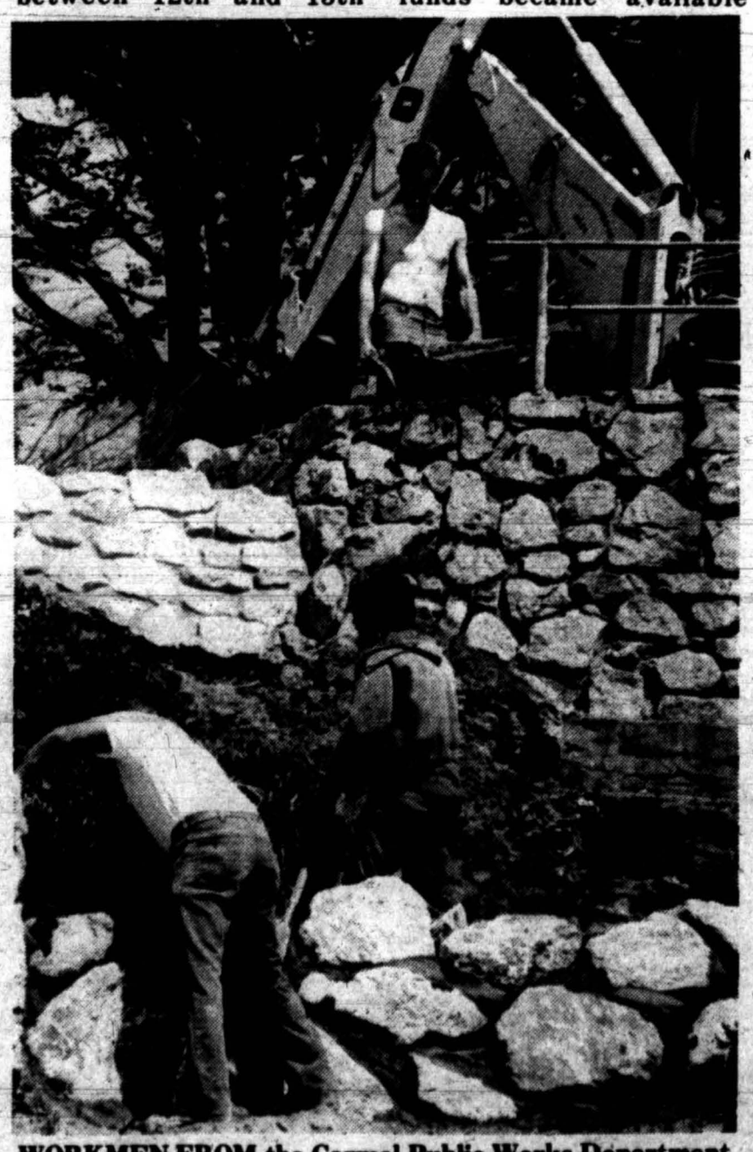
Victim of storms

Aid is asked for seawall

Carmel is eligible for more than $160,000 in federal aid to repair and replace the seawall along Scenic Drive that took the brunt of high waves during the February storms, according to City Administrator Jack Collins.

Portions of the wall between 12th and 13th Avenues collapsed or were weakened during the storms.

The money would come from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The Federal Disaster Insurance funds became available following severe flooding in mid-February. That is when President Jimmy Carter declared Monterey County a federal disaster area and the city made the request for aid.



WORKMEN FROM the Carmel Public Works Department were fortifying stretches of the seawall on Monday. Hardest hit was the portion along Scenic Drive near 13th Street. Storms that hit in February eroded the base of the wall and caused some mortared rock to cave in. (Michael Stang photo)

Investigators from CalTrans and the Federal Highway Administration visited here last month to determine the condition of the seawall. They were to file a report with the Federal Disaster Insurance Administration which would recommend approval or denial of the aid. The report would then be forwarded to HUD, the final decision-making body, according to Collins.

The city is awaiting work from HUD, Collins said. He expects to hear from them before the City Council meets again on June 5.

"If the aid is approved, the city could save a ton of money," Collins said.

The funds actually would underwrite three seawall projects that began in February and should continue through the summer. The biggest chunk, almost $100,000, would pay for the 256 feet of seawall damaged or lost to the storm. More than 175 feet of the wall was completely lost. The rest is cracked and must be replaced, Collins said.

Another estimated $58,000 would underwrite stabilization and restoration of the seawall bank, Collins said. Carmel also is eligible for a full reimbursement of the $2,100 in emergency repair work the city public works crews performed on the wall in February.

Not just a lark, though

Plucky retirees boat down the Carmel River

THE HAASIS HIKERS became the "Haasis Floaters" for a day when four members of the group, founded in the 1930s, boarded kayak and boat for a leisurely trip down the Carmel River.

They did some investigative work, braved white water stretches and even had to pluck one member from a deep section of the river after a spill. Other than the one incident, the four men — aged 65 to 80 — had a pleasant five-hour float to the lagoon at the mouth of the river.

The Haasis Hikers take their name from Fred Haasis who was a ranger in the Los Padres National Forest in the 1920s. The group has weekly hikes to "any one of 50 to 60 locations within a 50-mile radius," according to Earl Moser of Hacienda Carmel, one of the members of the river expedition.

He suggested the trip because he wanted to see if any cottonwoods or other trees were dying near California-American Water Co. deep wells. Moser also wanted to check the work done by county flood control crews that cleared dead brush and trees from the riverbed and banks last year.

MAL BAUER, 72, of Carmel, provided one of the two craft, a two-man kayak he bought in Munich in 1932. He traveled with Gilbert P. Kinney, 70, of Monterey. Charles Lambie brought the other craft, a Port-A-Boat. Lambie, the youngster of the group at 65, traveled with Moser, the senior member at 80.

They set off at 10 a.m. from Garland Park, paddling or floating downstream from there. The kayak had to be portaged overland at one point because of shallow water over rapids. Moser and Lambie had to portage their boat three times, according to Bauer.

Bauer said he hasn't taken a trip down river since the mid-1950s.

According to Moser, aside from the pleasure of the journey itself, he was able to draw some conclusions about river life and bank conditions during the trip.

HE SAID HIS impression is that more riparian vegetation, particularly cottonwood trees, is dying near the deep Cal-Am wells than elsewhere. He also commended the county crews for doing a "good job" of clearing out dead trees which could have fallen and blocked the river during periods of storm runoff.

He was critical of two types of erosion protection along riverbanks: old auto bodies and car tires not covered over with vegetation.

The expedition arrived at the lagoon at 3:17 p.m. on April 28, with travel time of four hours and 30 minutes, allowing 45 minutes for lunch and for Lambie to dry out.

He took a tumble in water "over his head," according to Bauer. "I didn't know there were any holes that deep in the river."

MAL BAUER (astern) and Gilbert Kinney prepare to set off on a day-long trip down the Carmel River. They were joined by Earl Moser and Charles Lambie, all members of the Haasis Hikers.

KINNEY AND BAUER ride the rapids on one stretch of the Carmel River. Their kayak had to be portaged overland at one point because of shallow water. The rough stretches did not cause any mishaps, although Lambie took a tumble in the river later on.

New enrollment cutoff

Registration has begun for youngsters whose parents wish to have them enrolled in the early kindergarten class at Carmel River School.

Those eligible must have turned five between Dec. 2 and March 31. The special class observes an extended period in which a child can become five, the minimum age for kindergartners. The cut-off date customarily is Dec. 2.

If an adequate number of pupils are enrolled, the school plans to start the class in September. For more details, phone the school at 624-4609.

Long agenda given to sanitary board

CARMEL Sanitary District directors face a crowded agenda next Tuesday when they consider an annexation request from the developers of the proposed Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge, a preliminary budget for the coming fiscal year, and a state staff report which may be a prelude to a decision to prevent the district from releasing wastewater in Carmel Bay.

The directors will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Carmel City Hall.

Ben Hinrich of the Carmel Board of Realtors also plans a presentation to the board asking when the current ban on new hookups and annexations to the district might be lifted. He has said advice from the board would help landowners plan future uses for their property.

The Marriott application comes only two weeks before the proposal for the 376-room hotel is again reviewed by the Monterey County Planning Commission. The commission had asked the developers, Winthrop-Carmel Inc., to seek annexation to the district before the county hearing resumes on May 31.

The developers have said in the past they would prefer to join the district, but they also are developing plans for an on-site sewage treatment plant in the event they are turned down.

The district imposed a moratorium on annexations and hookups in August 1976 because the treatment plant was nearing its rated capacity of 2.4 million gallons per day in dry weather.

DISTRICT directors also will review a draft report by the staff of the State Water Resources Control Board which recommends rejection of the district's five alternatives for reducing or eliminating wastewater discharge into Carmel Bay. The bay was declared an Area of Special Biological Significance by the state in 1975. Disposal of treated wastewater is prohibited in an ASBS, although the state board can approve a variance permitting it.

District engineer Kevin Walsh met with state staff two weeks ago and was told they would try to modify the draft so the district alternatives for recycling and reclaiming the water at least are given a hearing. The current draft report recommends rejection of all of the alternatives.

The district, which faces a July 1 deadline for coming up with an acceptable alternative, had proposed using treated waste water for golf course irrigation or irrigation of Carmel River vegetation. These alternatives only reduce bay discharge by 20 to 40 per cent.

The district also could pipe its sewage over Carmel Hill for treatment and disposal in Monterey Bay. But public sentiment at a meeting last fall favored reclaiming the water, Walsh said.

The district budget presentation will renew discussion by directors on whether to eliminate the property tax entirely or move more slowly toward user-fee funding of the district.

Four-month moratorium slapped on 'large houses'

THE CARMEL City Council approved a four-month moratorium on large residential construction Monday evening.

The moratorium took effect immediately. It will not affect most Carmel homes. It primarily applies to houses on lots larger than 4,000 square feet.

Three major changes are contained in the new interim ordinance. They are:

- Allowed structural coverage on lots larger than 4,000 square feet is reduced. A graduating scale reduces coverage 2 to 10 per cent depending on the size of the house.
- Rooflines will have to follow the contour of lot slopes. The planning commission now will have to approve all permit requests for buildings higher than 24 feet.
- House setbacks on lots larger than 4,000 square feet would increase. The setback distance would have to equal 10 per cent of the length of the front property line.

The urgency ordinance passed 4-1. Councilman David Hughes dissented. "I'm not at all convinced there is this kind of an emergency," Hughes said. The urgency ordinance required four affirmative votes.

But the rest of the council, along with City Attorney George Brehmer and City Administrator Jack Collins, supported the measure. "Pass an ordinance. Make it definite. Give the staff some guidelines," Brehmer said.

Collins said recent City Council directives and policy statements have left the city open to legal criticism. "Put an ordinance in writing," he said.

The urgency ordinance banning certain residential construction was written and recommended by the Carmel Planning Commission. It is an interim measure to regulate large construction while the commission continues to study new permanent ordinances.

"I was never in favor of a moratorium, but in this instance, I feel it is needed," said Councilman Howard Brunn. He said it will give the planning commission "breathing time" to write permanent guidelines.

THE PLANNING commission should complete the new standards before the four-month moratorium expires in September, Collins said.

The urgency ordinance exempts builders who have already obtained valid building permits.

"Are there any building department plans that will now get stuck?" Brunn asked Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham.

Cunningham said there were none.

Councilman Mike Brown argued for lowered building heights. "Let's make it simple. Pick the lowest point on the lot and say you can't go up higher than 24 feet," he said. The proposed method for measuring would be based on an average of the highest and lowest elevation upon which the foundation would rest.

"But this is perfectly reasonable. The planning commission spent 20 or 30 hours on it. We can't sit here at 12:10 a.m. and clarify that slope and density business," Brunn told Brown.

Councilman Helen Arnold moved for the moratorium. Brown seconded the motion.

But before the council voted, Planning Commissioner Leslie Gross said a resolution would suffice. "A resolution is no different from an ordinance. It is law," he said.

This irked Brehmer, who has long opposed legislation through policy statement. "I'm your legal council. Mr. Gross is incorrect. You can only legislate through ordinances," he said.

Stop sign, parking ban okayed

THE CARMEL City Council voted Monday to eliminate 11 potential parking spaces at a hazardous intersection near the Forest Theater.

It also approved installation of the city's 209th stop sign, then disapproved a request for what would have been the 210th.

The new no parking zone is at the intersection of Mountain View and Torres. The new restrictions will be enforced 20 feet from three corners at the intersection and 30 feet from the fourth. It is situated on the south side of Mountain View west of Torres.

The City Council voted 4-1 on the parking restriction. Councilman David Hughes dissented.

No accidents have been reported at the intersection in "recent years," according to a report from Carmel Police Sergeant Gerald E. Pullen. But he still recommended the new restrictions.

"The manner in which vehicles park, the way the intersection is physically situated and the considerable visibility restrictions pose an immediate hazard to vehicle as well as pedestrian traffic," Pullen said in his report.

He said the parking is used primarily by merchants and their employees.

Cars parked haphazardly at the intersection present "a major problem for fire and emergency equipment," said Captain Bob Fisher of the police department.

The parking restriction will increase visibility problems and reduce congestion at the intersection, Pullen said.

The lawmakers also approved a new stop sign at the northeast corner of Scenic and Eighth. Six accidents have been reported at the location since September 1975.

"The primary vision obstruction is a large solid, stone wall at the northeast corner of the intersection," Pullen said.

"I'm opposed to all stop signs," Councilman Mike Brown said, but he voted for approval along with the rest of the council members.

Road signs to go 'back to nature'

Carmel street sign posts eventually will get back to nature if Councilman Howard Brunn has his way.

Brunn proposed installing wood posts from now on for city street and traffic signs. The Carmel City Council went along with Brunn's proposal and unanimously approved it Monday.

State law mandates that traffic signs must be metal, but the posts that hold the signs can be wooden, according to City Administrator Jack Collins. Carmel's present traffic posts are made of metal pipe.

The wooden posts probably will cost a little more and not last as long as metal ones, Collins said. But he said the city will order "pressure treated" posts. A material is forced into the wood that decreases the chance of rotting.

"When the posts do rot and fall, that will give us an opportunity to re-evaluate if the signs are necessary," Councilman Mike Brown said.

Pine Knots

Tourism and the arts: symbiosis at its best

by Al Eisner

"Symbiosis: The living together in intimate association or close union of two dissimilar organisms when mutually beneficial."

—Merriam-Webster Dictionary

CARMEL'S RICH cultural life is as much a source of pleasure to its residents as the great natural beauty and splendid climate of our enchanted village.

Ever since its founding, Carmel has been known as a haven for artists, actors, writers, poets and musicians. The amenities offered by the numerous art galleries, craft shops, restaurants, theaters and musical events are certainly an important part of the Carmel way of life.

Opinion

The rich and varied musical life enjoyed by the 4,500 residents of Carmel would arouse the envy of some big-city denizens. It includes:

• The Carmel Bach Festival. The two-week festival attracts world-renowned musicians and singers every summer. What other village of comparable size could host an appearance by the world's greatest Wagnerian soprano?

• The Monterey County Symphony Orchestra. One of the top 100 orchestras in the nation, it has grown steadily in quality and stature with the help of massive, broadly based support from the community. Season tickets for Monday night concerts at Sunset Center are sold out before the season starts.

• Carmel Music Society and the Chamber Music Society. These two venerable organizations bring some of the world's finest instrumentalists and ensembles to Sunset Center. Members work tirelessly to maintain the quality of the programs and to sell tickets.

• Hidden Valley Music Seminars. The orchestra and choral concerts by Hidden Valley have thrilled thousands of people. The new opera program has been acclaimed by musicians and critics from all parts of the country. A member of the opera ensemble just won first prize in the Metropolitan Opera west coast auditions.

• The Carmel Dance Festival. Sponsored by the city of Carmel, some exciting and exotic dance companies have been brought to the Sunset Center stage.

• Special events. Nationally known musicians and ensembles are frequently booked into Sunset Center Theatre or the Forest Theater.

And we shouldn't forget, the motel taxes pay entirely for the upkeep and operation of Sunset Cultural Center, where many of these events are staged. The motel taxes also are being used to retire the bonded indebtedness for the city-owned center. That means that the appreciative tourists are paying most of the expense for Sunset.

Carmelites also enjoy live stage performances at the Studio Theatre-Restaurant and the Barnyard Theatre, in addition to the outdoor performances on the stage of the historic Forest Theater.

WHY ENUMERATE all this? It is important to note that most of these programs would dry up or be sharply reduced in quality if it were not for the attendance by music and theater lovers from out of town.

More than half of the attendance at the Carmel Bach Festival is by folks from outside the Monterey Bay area.

More than half of the audience at the Forest Theater Guild outdoor performances is comprised of people from out of town.

The commercial theaters struggle through the winter months but blossom during the spring and summer months when tourists pack their theaters. It would drastically alter the theater scene if they depended only on local audiences.

WHAT RELATIONSHIP does all this have to the arts and crafts in Carmel? Ask any merchant or gallery owner who buys art. The local audience is very limited. It's the people from out of town who make it possible for many hundreds of artists and craftsmen to earn their living here.

Aren't these the very people who gave Carmel its world-famed reputation? If there were no marketplace for the artists and craftsmen, they would move elsewhere.

And what of the businessmen and merchants who offer these goods for sale? Are they all greedy, ruthless parasites who extract profits but return nothing to the community?

We've already mentioned the benefits Carmelites enjoy from the huge amount of tax revenues generated by the commercial district. But the contribution made by individuals from the business community are much more far-reaching. Many of our cultural programs are supported heavily by local business in the form of direct contributions. The leadership of charitable and cultural organizations is frequently comprised of businessmen who volunteer their management and financial expertise to benefit the community.

Many of these business people came to Carmel after achieving recognition and financial security elsewhere in the nation. They can be a real community treasure.

One businessman we know sells the work of local artists and craftspeople exclusively, even though he could reap greater profits by displaying and selling sleazier goods. This same person served as president of the Monterey County Symphony Association for two years. He also acted in several productions at the Forest Theater. He came to Carmel after a highly successful career in merchandising with major companies in other parts of the country.

He also serves now as a member of the Carmel City Council. In case you haven't guessed, his name is David Hughes.

Shakespeare comes alive at Forest Theater

This is the third in a series of editorials on the "Enchanted Village" of Carmel. The first installment examined the changes in lifestyles in the Village in recent years and concluded that Carmel was still a wonderful place to live. Last week's column pointed out that Carmel residents enjoy high levels of municipal services (police, fire protection, etc.) at very little cost because of the tax revenues from the business district.

While David is perfectly capable of speaking for himself, I thought it appropriate to cite his activities as an example of the symbiotic relationship that always has existed between the residential and business communities in Carmel.

THE CARMEL CITY COUNCIL, under the leadership of Mayor Gunnar Norberg, has adopted a "pro-resident" stance that has taken on the dimensions of an anti-business crusade.

For the reasons cited earlier (and many, many more), I believe the two interests can co-exist. They always have in Carmel. There is no reason to assume they cannot in the future, unless the Norberg majority chooses to provoke unnecessary conflicts with businessmen and property owners. This can be avoided by pursuing a policy of consultation rather than confrontation.

Carmel is not in crisis. It could be led into crisis, though.

Slanted headline

Dear Editor:

Your article of May 4 regarding the county administration's analysis of Proposition 13 is a perfect example of slanted journalism.

Rather than labeling your article "Jarvis' bite pegged at $25 million," you should have said, "Jarvis' reduction of tax bite pegged at $25 million."

You continually referred to what the Jarvis amendment will cost. It won't cost anything. Quite the contrary, it will result in a direct savings of costs to the taxpayers.

You use the usual scare tactics about all the "services" that will be reduced or eliminated. Hallelujah, I say! I, for one, am fed up of passing the county road crews performing their "services," one or two men working, three or four watching; of seeing county vehicles tooling around at night and weekends for personal use; of having supervisors for one day's work a week raise their pay above the average monthly nongovernment wage; of paying a 37-member planning department whose main purpose appears to be to make the people cowtow to their personal socialistic beliefs as to how or where we will live and use our land, not theirs; of paying fat cats on the government payroll far in excess of comparable private jobs. I could go on and on. Suffice it to say that the waste of taxpayers' hard-earned money is colossal. At last we can stop it in California by voting for that lucky-for-taxpayers Prop. 13.

When "Jarvis" passes, the schools will be adequately funded, not extravagantly funded. Our schools are loaded with deadwood that should have been pruned out long ago. Prop. 13 will provide the cutting shears to finally do it. Hallelujah!

Dear Editor:

I am finding the many well-written pamphlets published by the National Arthritis Foundation to be helpful in alerting me to the various symptoms as they appear and where to get assistance at the two clinics relatively close to the Peninsula.

Group meetings may be established in about 10 days when a physician or two can attend to give a brief talk and then open the meeting to questions.

If a reader wishes a list of available pamphlets, please phone me at 624-5747. A collection of pamphlets is now at the Carmel library near the desk for checking books.

Pine Cone used unauthorized information

Dear Editor:

It is unfortunate that one of your staff took it upon himself to develop a story concerning the Carmel Sanitary District with information that was not authorized by the board and was incorrect in some parts.

I refer to the article of last week entitled "Bay Dumping Must Stop, Carmel Told."

The material which was presented to your reporter by one of the district board members had not been seen by three of the five other members and has not been discussed before the board as a whole.

I am referring to the draft copy of a letter from the staff of the State Water Quality Control Board which contained their thoughts concerning the alternatives which have been developed by the sanitary district in the Areawide Facilities Plan contract.

It is correct to state that the staff of the State Water Quality Control Board did indicate that they would recommend to the state board not to accept the alternatives, but for your reporter to develop the story in such a manner that it appeared that further use of the outfall was to be eliminated as soon as possible is inexcusable. In my opinion, it is very poor journalism and not of the quality which I believe you have attempted to maintain.

In addition, the comments of Mr. Earl Moser, a former sanitary district board member, are very interesting to me in that I was also serving on the board at the same time.

He has stated that the western portion of the Odello lands (Odello West) could be used for additional treatment of effluent after it had gone through the treatment plant itself and additional treatment on the eastern portion of the Odello lands.

He should remember that the State Division of Parks and Recreation upon their purchasing of the Odello West replied to a direct question from the sanitary district as to the possibility of placing treated effluent on the land. Their reply was a flat no under any circumstances.

Also Mr. Moser was on the district board when a project was authorized for the possibilities of using Odello East for a treatment area. The study determined that there was insufficient land area to process the effluent correctly along with the necessity of having to repump the treated water from the ground and dispose of it into the ocean. It is strange how thinking can ange over such a short period of time.

Again I feel that you and your staff should not attempt to make news from only partial information or information that has not been authorized by the agency concerned, but should be more concerned with reporting those facts correctly instead of using that material which is presented to you by elements of our population which wish to slant the news to fit into their desires.

Carmel Sanitary District board member

Clarification

An article published last week about the two outstanding Carmel scholars honored for academic achievements left the impression their parents were separated.

Information supplied by Carmel High School showed separate addresses for the mother and father of the recipients, Theresa Thomas and Don Berta. Both couples, however, live together.

The Pine Cone regrets the error.

(Editor's note: Information on the draft response from the staff of the State Regional Water Quality Control Board was presented by Carmel Sanitary District staff and a member of the board of directors at a public meeting on April 26. The information was discussed there with the Technical Advisory Committee of the district in an effort to gauge public sentiment in the district toward the draft and toward district alternatives to sewage outfall in Carmel Bay.)

WOKE UP SHAKING from a nightmare the other night. The tourist was standing at Carmel gate saying, "Let me get it straight. Our passports are valid and here are our visas and permits for a week's stay. I understand that I am allowed $1,000 duty free and $500 each for my spouse and children. Our dogs must be leashed at all times and we must walk everywhere. Ice cream is to be eaten completely at the place of purchase.

"We may place flowers at the base of Gunnar the First's statue in Heritage Park and may only remove three sneakersful of sand from the beaches. We may not sing, dance or play music because we are not citizens of Carmel. We may only eat, drink and buy gifts and are allowed two hours of sunshine per day. Fog checks are given as credit against extra duty payments. We are allowed four visits a year as long as our health certificates are in order."

The guard at Carmel gate answered: "Yes, sir. You have it right. Here is your map. Be sure to keep to the red areas marked. The green residential areas are off-limits. And curfew is 9 p.m. Have a good visit!"

YES, VIRGINIA, there are good schools in Carmel. Correction: around Carmel. That's right. No school within the city limits. That means our kids go to school without local police or fire protection. Somehow, that makes me pretty uneasy. If the schools need policemen or firemen, I don't like to have arguments occur, as does happen, about just who should answer the call. I want to know that Fisher will spring forth from the squad car, or Dick Lugo and the rest of the guys will drop gasoline hoses and sprint to the rescue.

PUC told it should view 'big picture' before it lifts water meter ban

By KEN PETERSON

THE STATE PUBLIC Utilities Commission will be asked to consider water supplies for the entire Monterey Peninsula and not just for the California-American Water Co. service area when hearings resume next month on a request to permit new meter connections by the water company. About 30 per cent of the 128,000 who live on the Peninsula get their water elsewhere, either from wells or other smaller water companies.

Richard Sullivan, vice president of Cal-Am in charge of the Monterey district, told the Pine Cone Friday growth outside the company's service area is a problem for city and county planning officials, not Cal-Am. Company figures presented at last week's three-day PUC hearing claim that the utility will be able to provide 22,500 acre feet of water per year, enough for an additional 9,852 meter connections on the Peninsula.

But those who oppose an end to the ban on new meter connections and water main extensions—including Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel—counter that there are thousands of water users in the area outside the Cal-Am service boundaries. Since they all draw on the same water supply as Cal-Am, Farr told the Pine Cone Monday, the issue of total water needs should be addressed by the PUC before it agrees to end the ban.

Farr added that the proposed Monterey Peninsula Water Management District may be the vehicle for comprehensive water use planning. Formation of the district and election of directors will be decided by Peninsula voters on June 6.

The PUC staff has recommended lifting the ban on new meters and main extensions, imposed in two separate orders in June 1975 and May 1973. A report by senior utilities engineer Eugene Lill to the PUC notes that with completion of the Canada de la Segunda pipeline, the Begonia iron removal plant and addition of three new wells, Cal-Am has answered the water supply concerns raised when the bans were imposed.

At the time the bans were ordered, the PUC ruled that water supplies were inadequate for additional customers.

Lill's report, delivered at the PUC hearings before hearing examiner Carol Coffey, finds that, "There is an adequate water supply at present for the current load and normal growth. Service to additional customers will not injuriously withdraw the supply wholly or in part from those who ... have been supplied" by Cal-Am.

Sullivan said the company based its estimate of nearly 10,000 new connections on historic water use patterns for the Peninsula. He said Friday the rate at which the connections would be brought into service depends upon the growth rate for the area.

The best estimate of Cal-Am engineer Steve Lonhart is that all the new meters will be in service by 1995. The request for an end to the ban on new connections is based on being able to service all undeveloped acreage within the Cal-Am service area with a "100 per cent buildout, Sullivan said Friday. For Carmel Valley, the company estimated one service connection per acre on the remaining 3,115 undeveloped acres. In Carmel, the estimate is 0.19 acres per connection on 21 undeveloped acres.

SULLIVAN SAID WHILE growth might be more dense in some of the incorporated cities than has been predicted, he does not believe the number of connections or water use "would change that much." And, he added, it "won't all occur in one year" so the company would have time to react if population density does change dramatically.

As for growth outside the Cal-Am service area, that's "not our responsibility," he said. "Growth is a responsibility not of a water company but of political entities."

On the total water supply picture, Lill commented in his report that, "There are other users of the underground water supply besides the California-American Water Co. Although this utility is the major user, adequate safeguarding of the water supply of the Monterey Peninsula will not be accomplished by controlling only it and its customers."

Planning Commissioner William Peters of Carmel Valley disagreed and spent several hours testifying at two of the three hearing sessions.

Peters told the Pine Cone Monday that, contrary to Lill's report, total demand on the Carmel Valley aquifer needs to be considered before Cal-Am is permitted to expand its services.

He pointed out that of 22,000 acres in the Carmel Valley Master Plan study area, only 3,300 are within the Cal-Am service area. County environmental health officer Walter Wong testified at the hearing that the county cannot control drilling of new wells in the Valley.

Mark Kostielney, supervising sanitarian with the health department, said Monday the county "cannot at this point prohibit drilling of wells as long as they meet certain standards." The department cannot reject mutual water companies, either, although they are subject to engineering control and use permit approval from the planning commission.

Fran Houston of the planning department said, to her knowledge, no mutual company has been denied a use permit, although extensive information about landscaping, drawdown of the aquifer near the well and other factors have been reviewed. An environmental impact report has been requested for the Tularcitos Water Co. in the Cachagua area.

"The county is in a tough situation," Farr said Monday. "Legally we cannot regulate (wells). We're trying to tell the Public invited to join spring campus clean-up

It's spring cleaning day at Carmel High School this Saturday, with students, parents and faculty planning to turn out to "spruce up the campus," according to Vice Principal Paul Sheckler.

"Beautification Day" will begin at 9 a.m. when people gather in the high school cafeteria to get equipment and begin work. It will end with a potluck picnic lunch in the afternoon.

According to Sheckler, the day was planned jointly by parents, students and staff to do some cleaning and brightening of the campus and "to bring some interest from the community to the school."

Tools and cleaning equipment will be provided, he said. Participants should wear work clothes. Work to be done includes gardening, painting and outside clean-up.

For the potluck lunch beginning at 1 p.m., Sheckler said people should bring their own table service and a dish which can feed six.

Art sale to benefit SPCA

A benefit for wildlife and domestic animals is planned Saturday from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Pebble Beach home of Mrs. Phillips Finlay.

A variety of art works depicting animals will be on display and for sale to benefit the Monterey County SPCA Animal Shelter and the Wildlife Refuge Fund.

Money is being raised to purchase land for a national wildlife refuge in the southern end of San Francisco Bay at Alviso Slough.

The benefit will include cocktails, buffet supper and music.

The Clark Foundation of Pebble Beach is spearheading the wildlife fund drive. Mrs. Frank Duran, daughter of the late Willis and Ethel Clark who created the foundation, is helping plan the private party and sale.

PUC hearing testimony — cont'd.

PUC to look at the big picture."

He said that while the PUC may consider "safe yield" from the aquifer "the point when you get saltwater intrusion, for the residents of the Valley 'safe yield' is a balanced system where you don't kill the vegetation.

"We're saying, look, there are a lot of people drawing on the system. Take a look at what is environmentally sound. Our whole emphasis is to try and create a balanced system without endangering the environment yet so you can have managed growth."

Farr, chairman of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency, said the management district going to the voters in June could help plan the "big picture" of Peninsula water use.

"After studying all the entities dealing with water on the Peninsula—and I think there are 14—none of them have the legal or financial capability to do anything about it," he said.

FARR HELPED DRAFT the legislation to create the district. He said it would have "as much authority as a district can legally have under the existing California Constitution."

The district would be able to "hire its own experts" on water supply rather than relying on the talents of individuals who are "not paid but follow the situation out of their own interest."

"The problem is how do you refute expert testimony?" Farr said. "Cal-Am has its own engineers. There isn't even a county hydrologist. We're looking for the facts. If there were a public district, we could go in with our experts, with information independently determined, and say what we believe."

Farr said the water management agency will work with the unpaid water experts on the Peninsula to develop its own arguments on the water supply situation before Coffey reconvenes the public hearings. The agency next meets on Wednesday, May 24 and Coffey continued the hearings until after that date to get more public agency comment.

Peters, during his testimony, raised several questions about the request to lift the bans. He contended that service should first be offered to Carmel Valley residents who drilled wells in the past three years because they couldn't get a water meter. He told the Carmel Valley Master Plan committee on Thursday of last week that it makes more sense to have them tied to Cal-Am than to have "a bunch of people punching holes in the aquifer" for wells or mutual water companies serving a single subdivision.

He added that he believes all of the Carmel Valley should be part of the Cal-Am service area to make for more managed water planning and to prevent contamination of the aquifer.

Sullivan said during the hearings that Cal-Am does not wish to expand its present service area.

"We will expand our service area only if water above and beyond the 22,000 acre feet is brought with it," he said Monday.

The company would accept customers with wells or in mutual water systems but "it depends which aquifer they are drawing on."

And if they are using the Carmel Valley aquifer?

"It's all coming out of the same bucket," he said.

CARL HOOPER of Bestor Engineers Inc. told the Master Plan committee that if Cal-Am expands its service area it is required to provide water service to new customers within the boundaries.

But, he said, if they later annex a development from outside the area, they can require the developer to pay for installation of water mains and other facilities. The company also can incorporate the full cost of those improvements into its rate base immediately, Hooper said.

The rate base is Cal-Am's investment in the utility and determines what its income will be. Connection fees and water use charges are based on receiving a fixed percentage of the rate base as a return on its investment. A larger rate base requires more income—from connection charges and water use fees—to reach that percentage.

Hooper said he believes, with Peters, that all of the Valley should be part of the Cal-Am system.

"No matter how good a job we do (engineering) a mutual water company, it still depends on whether an amateur is running the thing," he told the committee.

By allowing additional mutual companies, the county is "creating a basket of snakes," Hooper added.

Peters said Monday if expansion of the water company service area brings some more development, "so be it. Under a growth management plan with quality of development criteria, I'm not scared of that."

The Master Plan study committee will begin considering growth management plans for the Valley tonight when it meets at Carmel Valley Manor. The meeting is at 7:30 p.m.

Under discussion are proposals similar to the "Petaluma plan," which limits total building permits each year and allocates them to the highest quality developments as determined by an established set of criteria.

ORDINANCE NO. 78-10
INTERIM ZONING ORDINANCE ADOPTED AS AN URGENCY MEASURE PROHIBITING CONSTRUCTION OF LARGE HOUSES IN THE RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT.

BACKGROUND:

1. The Residential District of Carmel-by-the-Sea has long been known for its quaint and charming cottages and the charm and peacefulness flowing from the balance between man and nature.

2. Lots in Carmel-by-the-Sea are small in size and the structures built on them in the past have been generally small in scale.

3. The value of lots in Carmel-by-the-Sea has increased drastically over the past few years and, as a result, it has become economically feasible to remove existing small cottages and replace them with structures of maximum size allowed under the zoning laws and to build structures of maximum size allowed on vacant lots.

4. Increase in the size of structures in the Residential District and the removal of smaller structures has altered and threatens to further alter the character of the Residential District.

5. On March 6, 1978, the City Council requested the Planning Commission to study the impact of large houses being built, to review applications for permits to construct large houses, and to report back to the Council within 60 days.

6. The Planning Commission has diligently studied the matter and recognizes that a problem does exist.

7. Additional time is needed to complete the study and to develop the ordinance necessary to control the problem.

8. In order to allow for the additional time, an interim Urgency Ordinance is necessary.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. Interim Standards. Part X of the Municipal Code of Carmel-by-the-Sea is hereby amended during the period of this moratorium to prohibit the issuance of any building permit for structures in the Residential District which do not meet the standards established by this Ordinance. Part X of the Municipal Code is amended and interim standards are established as follows:

a. Section 1310.7, "HEIGHT LIMITATION," is temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standards established:

HEIGHT LIMITATION. Buildings within the residential district shall not exceed two stories in height nor have an average building height above natural grade adjacent to the exterior walls of twenty-four (24) feet. In addition, no portion of the structure shall exceed twenty-four (24) feet in height above natural grade adjacent to the exterior walls, or exceed a maximum height of twenty (20) feet to the plate line of the building. The height limitation shall be exclusive of fireplace chimneys which shall not exceed a height of thirty (30) feet above the natural grade adjacent thereto. Variances under Section 1341.2 of the Municipal Code may be applied for to a maximum height of thirty-three (33) feet, subject to the applicant submitting a topographical map indicating that excessive slope creates a hardship of the land and that existing development on adjacent sites within the block, or an adjacent block facing the site has buildings which are equal to or exceed the height of the variance requested.

b. Section 1310.73, "BUILDING COVERAGE LIMITATION," is temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standards established:

BUILDING COVERAGE LIMITATION. Building coverage shall be determined by the square-foot area of a site and by the number of stories in the building. The following table shall be the maximum allowable coverage of a building site:

Site Size (sq. ft.)	One-Story (per cent)	Two-Story (per cent)
4,000 or less	40	35
4,000 to 5,000	38	34
5,000 to 6,000	36	33
6,000 to 7,000	34	32
7,000 to 8,000	32	31
8,000 and over	30	30

Building coverage shall mean all of the square foot area contained within the exterior walls of a building, any roofed porches or decks and any roofed structure supported on posts and beams. Windows with a minimum dimension of eighteen (18) inches above the floor, and eaves may extend eighteen (18) inches beyond the structural support members or exterior walls and shall not be counted as building coverage. Decks not exceeding the height of the first floor level of the building shall not be counted as coverage if the floor area of the deck does not exceed 10 per cent of the allowable coverage of the building site, and such decking material consists of spaced decking or other decking material which does not provide a weather-proof barrier which could be considered or come under the classification of a roof, and when the deck area is unroofed and open to the sky.

c. Section 1310.75, "SIDE YARDS," is temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standards established:

SIDE YARDS. Side yards shall be provided for all buildings in the residential district and such side yards shall be determined by the length of the front property line. Side yards shall be equal to 10 per cent of the length of the front property line except for 40 x 100 foot lots which shall have a minimum setback of three (3) feet. A property owner may at his discretion transfer 50 per cent of the required side yard setback to one side yard or the other, but in no case shall a side yard be reduced to less than three (3) feet. The only encroachment that shall be allowed into a minimum three (3) foot side yard setback are fireplace chimneys or eaves extending not more than eighteen (18) inches into such setback, and masonry stoops and stairs which may extend to the property line. Any building or portion of a building exceeding fifteen (15) feet in height above natural grade adjacent to the exterior walls of a building shall provide a five (5) foot minimum setback to that portion of the structure exceeding fifteen (15) feet in height.

When a corner lot of record is combined with an adjoining inside lot of record and resubdivided into two (2) building sites, no building shall be erected or maintained nearer to the street than ten (10) feet.

In determining side yard setbacks for irregular shaped lots, the front and back yard shall be combined and an average taken from the two dimensions, and 10 per cent of this average shall determine what the side yards shall be.

d. Section 1310.76, "REAR YARD," is temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standards established:

REAR YARD. A rear yard of not less than three (3) feet shall be provided for every building in the residential district, and no structure or portion thereof exceeding fifteen (15) feet in height above the natural grade at the rear property line shall be built closer to the rear property line than fifteen (15) feet.

e. Section 1350.17, "BUILDING COVERAGE DEFINITION," is temporarily deleted as it would apply to the residential district and the recommended standard under subparagraph b of this Section shall define building coverage.

f. Section 1350.21, "BUILDING HEIGHT-RESIDENTIAL DEFINITION," is temporarily deleted and recommendation under subparagraph a of this Section shall define building height.

g. Section 1351.18, "YARD" (definition), is temporarily deleted during the moratorium as it would apply to the residential district and the following standards established:

YARD. An unoccupied space on a building site, which space (except as hereinafter provided) shall be open and unobstructed from the ground upward. Required yard dimensions shall be measured between the property line of the building site and that part of the building or structure nearest to said property line. The following structural features may occupy required yard spaces and will not be deemed encroachments thereon: eaves and—or one outside fireplace chimney projecting not over eighteen (18) inches; unenclosed masonry porches or stoops at an elevation no higher than the ground floor of the building and projecting into the side yard to the property line; unenclosed porches and stoops at an elevation no higher than the ground floor of the building and projecting into the front or rear setback but not to exceed 10 per cent of the allowable coverage of the building site, and when not extending more than 50 per cent into the required front and rear yard setback; walls or fences not over six (6) feet in height above the natural grade at any point adjacent to said fence along the rear and side property lines within fifteen (15) feet of the front property line; and walls or fences not over four (4) feet in height along the front property line or the side property line within the first fifteen (15) feet of the front property line.

h. Section 1310.01 g., "PERMITTED USES," is temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standards established:

PERMITTED USES. Fences and walls not over six (6) feet in height above the natural grade at any point adjacent to said fence along the rear and side property lines within fifteen (15) feet of the front property line; walls or fences not over four (4) feet in height along the front property line or the side property line within the first fifteen (15) feet of the front property line.

Section 2. Statement of Urgency. This Ordinance is an Urgency Ordinance, under the provisions of Section 65858 of the Government Code of the State of California. Its adoption is required for the preservation of the public peace, health and safety, in that the City proposes to consider enacting changes in its existing zoning regulations in the areas covered by this Ordinance. These changes, it is deemed, are needed urgently. The City Council, therefore, adopts this Ordinance to avoid the frustration of the purpose of the proposed changes during the interim period of study, and to prevent unfair economic advantage to any persons able to make developments in these areas at this time.

Section 3. Exemptions. This ordinance shall not apply to any persons who have been issued building permits prior to and which remain valid as of the effective date of this ordinance.

Section 4. Effective Date. As an Urgency Ordinance, this Ordinance shall become effective immediately and shall terminate at midnight on September 7, 1978, unless extended as provided by law.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, this 8th day of May, 1978, by the following roll call vote:

AYES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: Arnold, Brown, Brunn, Norberg.

NOES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: Hughes.

ABSENT: COUNCIL MEMBERS: None.

Party Plans

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

FROM OUR friend Don Blanding's lively book of verse Vagabond House comes this apt description of a real Hawaiian curry:

"Lobster curry on mounds of rice,
If you like curry, it's mighty nice.
With grated coconut, featured down,
Little green onions frizzled brown.
Nuts and the yolks of hardboiled eggs,
Mango chutney and garlic pegs,
Anchovy paste and Bombay 'duck,'
Bits of bacon and Hindu truck,
Minced green peppers and chowchow, too,
And everything else that occurs to you!

Curried Casserole Waikiki:

For eight hungry appetites: boil 4 lbs. fresh shrimp in seasoned water, remove them and throw the peeled shells back into the same water. Make a highly seasoned broth including the very best curry powder. First saute one minced garlic clove and 2 sliced onions in vegetable oil returning shrimp shells to broth. Mix 3 cups cooked white rice with melted butter. Line bottom of casserole dish with rice. Fill with shrimp and broth mixture topping with remaining rice. Sprinkle sauteed crisp bacon, chopped fresh parsely and canned cut up pimiento over all. Heat all the way through in moderate oven. Have varied condiments ready in small porcelain bowls using rice-pattern ones and spoons when available.

This was our solution for five o'clock after-swim buncheons at Waikiki where we rented an oceanfront cottage during part of our tour of Army duty. The casserole may be cooked, cooled and refrigerated the day before the 'tiffin' and reheated an hour before serving. Crab meat, lobster or cooked fresh fish also is excellent fare. No bread is necessary. Iced minted tea makes a splendid beverage while juicy mangoes eaten 'out of hand' add to the gaiety of the special occasion.

One Hilton specialty served at the Kahala Hilton is Breast of Capon Honolulu: Cook ¾ lb. wild rice according to package directions. Drain well. Make an ensemble of the rice and melted butter. When it starts to brown, remove from heat. Dredge 3 whole capons, split in half and boned, flour and cover with a white sauce spiked with sherry.

Meanwhile, split a fesh pineapple in half lengthwise leaving foliage on. Make a cavity by removing core and part of pulp. Dip the pineapple in hot water until heated through. Drain and spoon rice into each half. Top with chicken covering with sauce. Garnish with hot fried banana slices and hot cooked snow pod peas. Serve while still hot.

Carmel contest winner takes another award

The winner of the first annual Carmel Festival of the Firsts playwriting competition has won a second award for his play, Scenes and Revelations.

Last week, Elan David Garonzik, 27, of Waterford, Va., won the Audrey Wood Playwriting Award for 1978 for Scenes and Revelations. Miss Wood is a New York-based theatrical agent.

His play is scheduled for a world premiere production in Carmel in September. It also is tentatively scheduled for a New York opening next year.

The lives of four young women are explored in the play. They belong to the Mennonite order, a member of one of the Christian groups derived from the Anabaptist movement in Holland.

The play will be staged at Sunset Center, according to Sunset Director Richard Tyler. A director for the play should be selected later this month, Tyler said.

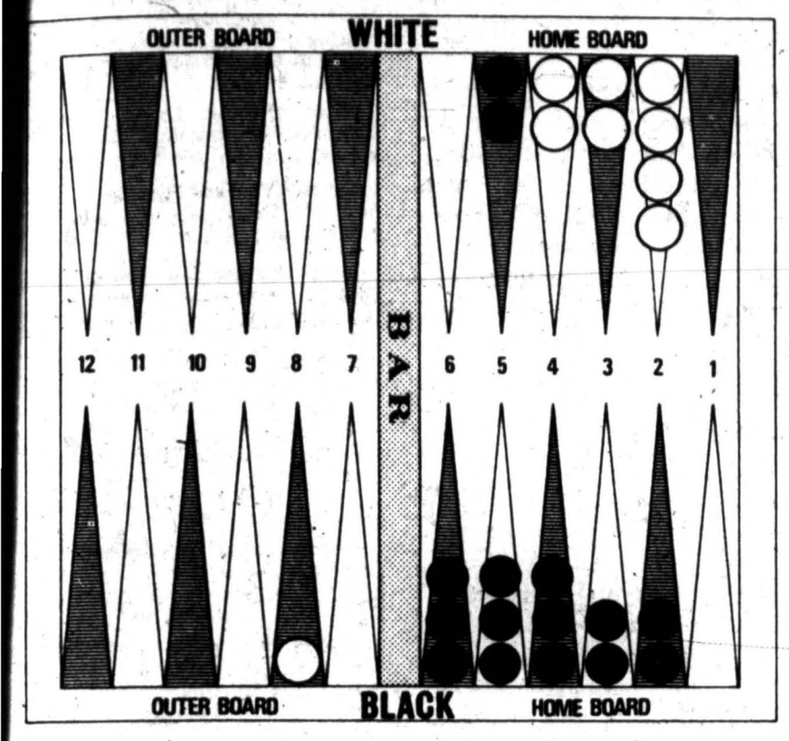
Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF



Black rolls 4-2. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Black is far behind in the race, and were it not for the fact that White, who had a blot hit earlier, still has to bring that man to safety, Black would be a strong favorite to lose a gammon.

In the actual position, however, Black has a very good chance to pull the game out of the fire. Indeed, if he succeeds in hitting the White blot, he would become a favorite to win, for Black stands a good chance of either closing his board or of picking up a second White man if White is forced to leave a blot later.

Therefore, all of Black's efforts should be directed to giving himself the maximum chance to hit the White blot as it tries to reach safety. Before Black can decide how to play this roll, he must take into consideration what the position is likely to be when next it is his turn to roll.

An average roll totals about eight. If we allow White an average roll, he will be able to bring his man to somewhere around his own 9-point.

It cannot be right to keep both Black men on the White 5-point, for that would leave the same number with which to hit the White blot. By having men on two different points, we greatly increase the number of combinations which hit. Therefore, one of the numbers of the roll must be used to move a man from the White 5-point. But which one?

We stand a better chance of hitting a man with a direct shot if we are further away from him — there are more combinations that make up four, five or six than two or three. Therefore, it cannot be right to use the 4 to play a man to White's 9-point. So we should use the 4 to slot a man on the Black 1-point, giving Black a better chance to close his board at his next turn.

That means, the 2 should be played by bringing a man to the White bar-point.

Hidden Valley Ensemble opens 'Rigoletto' Friday

The Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble's production of Verdi's thrilling opera Rigoletto will open Friday, May 12, at the Hidden Valley Theater, Ford Rd. and Carmel Valley Rd., Carmel Valley Village.

The opera will be staged Sunday, May 14; Tuesday, May 16; and May 18, 20, 23, 25, 28 and 30. The opera also will be presented June 1, 3 and 5. Evening performances begin at 8 p.m. and Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m.

The opera will be sung in English in all except four performances, in keeping with a tradition established at Hidden Valley when it first presented Mozart's Don Giovanni and Cosi Fan Tutte in 1975.

Rigoletto, described as one of the most challenging and thrilling operas ever written, is the tragic story of Rigoletto, the hunchback jester to the Duke of Mantua, and his beautiful daughter Gilda.

The Hidden Valley production will be directed by Paul Polivnick, associate conductor of the Indianapolis Symphony. Lincoln Clark, resident director of the Seattle Opera, will be the stage director and sets were designed by Henry Hill.

Stuart Redfield and Carlos Gueits-Bonilla will alternate in the role of the Duke of Mantua; Richard Wagner and Richard Haile will share the role of Rigoletto; and Francine Lancaster and Julianne Janes will alternate as Gilda.

The Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble selects 12 young singers each year by competitive audition to perform and study during the seven-month program. The singers live on the Hidden Valley campus for the seven months, immersed in a rigorous schedule of study and performance that runs from 8 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. six days a week.

Admission is $16 per person for the opening night performance with a gala champagne reception; all other performances are $8.

Tickets are available at Hidden Valley Music Seminars, Ford Rd. and Carmel Valley Rd., Carmel Valley Village; Countrywide Crafts in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Rd., Carmel; Gadsby's, 324 Main St., Salinas; the How to Do Anything Bookstore, Ocean and Monte Verde, Carmel; Lily Walker Records, 169 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove; and the Record Cove, 421 Alvarado St., Monterey.

More than 1,000 dogs entered in Del Monte show

Sleek Salukis, pampered poodles, tenacious terriors and dogs in bewildering array, all trimmed, plucked, shampooed and groomed to perfection, will converge on the Monterey Peninsula for the annual "Doggy Weekend" Saturday and Sunday, May 13 and 14, when four dog shows are scheduled.

More than 1,100 dogs representing more than 100 registered breeds will take over the town. Most are entered in the 53rd annual Del Monte Kennel Club All-Breed Show and Obedience Trial Sunday, May 14, at Collins Polo Field in Pebble Beach.

Three specialty shows, limited to one breed, are scheduled Saturday, May 13. The Northern California Afghan Hound Club, the Lhaso Apso Dog Club and the Monterey Bay English Setter Club shows will be held at the Monterey County Fairgrounds in Monterey.

The Del Monte Kennel Club expects an entry of more than 1,100 dogs. Once known as the "blue ribbon show" because entrants were required to win a blue ribbon at a recognized dog show to be eligible to compete, the Del Monte event is still one of America's top 50 dog shows in terms of numbers of entries. (The American Kennel Club, which governs purebred dog registry and licenses dog shows, dropped the blue ribbon requirement several years ago.) The show was held on the lawn in front of the Lodge at Pebble Beach until increased entries made the move to the polo field necessary.

Del Monte offers the public an opportunity to see many rare breeds that might not be encountered at small shows. Sunday's show has classes for Ibizan Hounds, Bearded Collies, Akitas and Bichon Frises, which are relative newcomers to the list of breeds accepted for AKC registration. Other intriguing breeds include Vizslas, Dandie Dinmont Terriers, Salukis, Borzois and Shih Tzus.

Obedience classes will be conducted all day in different categories of difficulty. Dogs compete for degrees that begin with Companion (C.D.) through Utility Dog Tracker (U.D.T.). The dogs must perform a variety of exercises — not tricks — that include heeling (walking at the handler's left side with or without a leash), sitting, lying down, jumping, finding an article with the handler's scent and ultimately, tracking a person.

Judging will begin at 8 a.m. and continue throughout the day until the Best Dog in Show is chosen at approximately 6 p.m. To win this highest award, the dog must first be chosen Best of Breed for its individual breed, then Best in Group after competing against other breed winners in his group. The six group winners then vie for the coveted Best in Show award.

Spectators are welcome to attend the show. There is no charge for admission although the $4 gate fee into Del Monte Forest will be in effect. Food concessions will operate throughout show hours. Collins Polo Field is on 17-Mile Drive and Portola Rd. just beyond Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach.

The three specialty shows at the Monterey County Fairgrounds, Fairgrounds and Garden Rds., Monterey, are also open to the public at no charge.

Spectators are advised to bring a warm coat or jacket because weather is unpredictable on the Monterey Peninsula at this time of year and all events are outdoors.

Maestro Haymo Taeuber concludes 10th season

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

HAYMO TAEUBER conducted the Monterey County Symphony last Sunday at King Hall, concluding ten full seasons as our orchestra's music director. An orchestra music director has a most complex job—much more than just waving a stick from atop a podium—and with all the ups and downs Taeuber has been a professional and an artist. He has made an enormous contribution to this community, not without risk, not without failure, and, not without great and enduring success. He has hostile critics, all of whom, to my experience, are significantly ignorant. He has more fans, many of whom, to my experience, are significantly informed. I, for one, simply revel in knowing that no live performance ever is the last word.

Music Corner

To the challenge Taeuber brings, first of all, knowledge. Also he brings experience, commitment, diplomacy, strong feelings, spiritual quest and an extraordinary sense of humor.

Sunday's concert featured the Prokofiev Piano Concerto No. 3, the Kodaly Hary Janos Suite and words by Villa Lobos, Sibelius and Gabrieli.

If the Italians Corelli and Vivaldi can claim paternal rights to the "cascading" string sound that virtually everyone since has borrowed, Giovanni Gabrieli was the original master of the sensual splendor of brass. His antiphonal brass choirs sent new and unprecedented vibrations into the soggy foundations of Saint Mark's Cathedral in Venice and established a concept of timbre that is imitated to this day.

Eleven brass from the Monterey County Symphony participated in three Gabrieli canzone. These short pieces were a marvelous appetizer for the evening's music. The playing was rich and full bodied but still airborne, and the music itself was of such high quality as to drive all care and distraction from the listener.

Gita Karasik was soloist in the Prokofiev Piano Concerto in C. In her last appearance with our orchestra, she played the Andrew Imbrie Piano Concerto. As brilliant as she was then, it was a sense of completeness that we heard her now in a well-known and popular work. Her playing was very attractive. Her artistic expression added depth and style to an already vivacious score, but the total event was, for me, the least satisfying of the evening. This work is a concert showpiece, with a breezy, sparkling and humorful character. The excitement was taken off the performance by tempi too broad in the first and last movements, tentative orchestral entrances (in this admittedly difficult score) and a humor-killing seriousness that pervaded the performance. Neither was there complete agreement over tempi between soloist and conductor. There were, however, many moments of beautiful playing by pianist and orchestra alike. I hope the succeeding two performances of this concert saw the return of light to the concerto.

The concert's second half was as rewarding as any performance this season, albeit its pops character. The Sibelius Karelia Suite was given a rich and idiomatic reading. I have never heard the middle movement, Ballade, played more beautifully. In this, Taeuber really surpassed the score, painting a lyric and pungent evocation of chivalry and romance. The orchestra sounded relaxed and secure and was very satisfying.

The Little Train of the Caipira by Villa Lobos is an enchanting tone picture whose cantus firmus is an ingenuous folkstyle melody around which the composer displays a witty mastery of orchestral effects depicting the little train. There is hissing steam, squealing steel wheels, screeching brakes, the train's horn and more. The performance was stoked and so was Taeuber. Grins abounded on stage and in the audience.

Kodaly's Hary Janos Suite concluded the concert and season and featured excellent playing by the orchestra. A major attraction, while only coloristic to the score, was the Hungarian cimbalom brought from the Bay Area with its 14-year-old player Paul Morrill. This is marvelous music and makes full use of the orchestra. The score is vividly colorful, loaded with special effects and shot through with irresistible humor, from the great orchestral sneeze at the very beginning that authenticates the tale right through to the emperor's entrance. The humor takes a lower profile in deference to rich orchestral opulence in Song and Intermezzo, but never completely disappears.

The orchestra and Taeuber will present their annual Pops Concert at the Monterey Fairgrounds on May 21.

A STURDY 55-ton M-60 A1 tank will be displayed Saturday, May 13, at Fort Ord's observance of Armed Forces Day. The observance, 10 a.m.-4 p.m., will include exhibits, demonstrations and a seven-mile run for military personnel and civilians.

'Hawaii' to be final show in Explorama travel series

Hawaii, the final film in the 1977-78 Explorama travel-adventure series, will be screened Thursday and Friday, May 11-12, 8:15 p.m., at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The producer, Don Cooper, will narrate the new feature-length film.

Cooper, a former lumberjack who worked in Alaskan logging camps off and on for 20 years, made three separate trips to the islands and spent five months on location while making the new film. He shot footage on all of the major islands at many tourist attractions and also in off-the-beaten-track areas.

He says he decided to make a film about Hawaii after many years of specializing in films about Alaska because "I finally got tired of having to thaw the camera out over a bonfire before every picture."

Cooper was born in De Borgia, Mont., and grew up in Montana lumber camps. He has been called the "Will Rogers of the travel-adventure platform" because of his collection of one-liners to accompany his films.

Tickets, at $3.75, are available at the Julia Marlowe Box Office in Sunset Center.

David Schneider Ensemble in Mother's Day concert

Schneider, concertmaster of the Monterey County Symphony during the fall season, is a violinist with the San Francisco Symphony and a teacher of music at San Francisco State and Lone Mountain College.

Other members of the ensemble are guitarist Rani Cochran, who teaches guitar at San Francisco State, and pianist Karen Rosenak, who teaches piano at San Francisco State.

The program will include works by Paganini, Ravel, Prosperi and Busoni.

Advance tickets, at $3.50, are available at the Monterey Box Office at Abinante Music, 425 Alvarado St., Monterey.

The noble French Chardonnays

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

THERE IS NO question but that the most noble of all white wine grapes is of that small-yielding vine properly called "Chardonnay" (long thought to be a white-fruited variant of the red wine grape, Pinot noir, Chardonnay has now been shown by viticultural research to have no relationship whatsoever to the Pinot family). In France it is the sole variety permitted in the production of that crisp, clean white wine called Chablis. It is also the grape which, at some distance south in the Cote de Beaune of Burgundy, produces the legendary Montrachet, which Alexander Dumas declared should be "drunk bareheaded and kneeling."

The wine of neighboring Meursault is said to be even more gentle and poetic from its Chardonnay origins. When grown in La Champagne, and harvested with a high acid ratio to sugar, it produces the crisp and light cuvee for the voguish Blanc de Blancs Champagne.

IN CALIFORNIA, the bidding for choice acreage of Chardonnay grapes for the 1978 harvest is already intense, and as high as $1,500-per-ton offers are more than rumor. The high demand has, of course, pushed the prices of California's fine Chardonnays upward from $5 with many currently resting at $7.50 or $8.

The equally high quality French Chardonnay wines of Burgundy, such as Corton, Corton-Charlemagne, Le Montrachet and Meursault Les Charmes, if available at all, start at about $20 per bottle. Montrachet Marquis de Laguiche for the 1976 Vintage is currently $33.75 and few will sell it for that listed price.

As a result of these high prices, which also include the out-of-sight prices for Pouilly-Fuisse (another Chardonnay wine), dozens of lesser quality French white burgundies of the Maconnais are currently attempting to capture the market demand with '76 Macon Blanc editions at from $3.95 to $6.99. I tasted a whole group of them, and came away wishing I could have a good California Chardonnay instead. The cheap French Chardonnays are thin, acidic to the point of being almost unpleasant. The better ones, of course, are splendid . . . and costly.

If this wine is your particular thirst-quencher and soothing appetizer, the 1976 Auxey-Duresses of Ropiteau Freres, an Appellation Meursault-Auxey-Duresses Controlee at $6.99, has considerable charm, but we've two other French wines as alternatives to the Chardonnay route which have their own intrinsic excitement, with reasonable price.

THE FIRST is the 1976 Muscadet de Sevre et Maine of the Marquis de Goulaine ($4.39). The parent grape, the Melon, found its way to this western region of the Loire Valley in the 12th century, from Burgundy. Oddly enough, according to the young Marquis, Robert de Goulaine, there's not a trace of the Melon in Burgundy today, but it is prized highly in the region around Nantes for making this splendid wine which, as a companion to the fruits of the sea, is an incomparable selection.

The Chateau de Goulaine has been recognized as an historical French monument for many centuries. Just 12 kilometers southeast of Nantes near the Loire's Atlantic mouth, the handsome castle has been the home of the Goulaine diplomacy responsible on three separate occasions for establishing peace between the warring Henry II Plantagenet, King of England, and Louis VII, King of France. Those sovereigns granted the Goulaine family their unique Coat of Arms bearing the Leopards of England and the Fleur-de-Lis of France. There are also three A's from the family motto, composed by Abelard, of Abelard and Heloise fame, who wrote: "A cestuy-ci, a cestuy-la, j'accorde les couronnes." This archaic French roughly translates: "To this one, and to that one, I confer the crowns."

TODAY'S WINEMAKER, descended from yesterday's kingmakers, Robert de Goulaine, lives in the splendid chateau with his wife and two children, attends to the international marketing of his wine, is an avid reader of Carlos Castaneda, a seeker and a finder where the secrets of fine winemaking are concerned. He also makes a limited amount of brandy from Folle Blanche of which he is very, very proud. That is the grape from which the earliest fine Cognacs were produced.

The second white wine, but by no means in second place, is a stunning Hermitage wine from the steep vineyards of the Rhone, from the cellars of the indomitable Max Chapoutier. Some years ago, on my first visit to the Chapoutier cellars, the voluble Chapoutier personally conducted us to the vineyards, walking distance from the cellars. We were trekking the Syrah, that ancient vine of Persian legend. Would this be the Petite Sirah of California? The Shiraz of Australia? "This is the Grand Syrah of the Rhone," Chapoutier told us. It makes the red wine of Hermitage, and is one of the mainstays of Cote Rotie, and is one of many varieties in Chateauneuf-du-Pape.

When we returned to the cellar, a light rain was falling, but we stood outside beneath a canopy where some barrel tables had been set up. I tasted a series of red wines, all the while silently wondering about the single white wine that was there, unpoured. Its turn came at the end. Chapoutier explained that the wine would speak for itself, explaining the unorthodox order of service. It was nothing short of enormous! It was called Chante-Alouette rather poetically ... of the song of the skylark! Make no mistake, however, about the lyric nature of the wine; it is bold. It carries a fine golden hue from its wood-aging, and the current vintage, a splendid 1973, is 14 per cent alcohol by volume, already five years old and certain to last another five if you can keep from pulling the corks of whatever supply you can obtain. It retails in the west for $8.45 and is worth every penny! This great Chapoutier wine, from the Marsanne and Roussanne grapes, could outshine even a Chardonnay.

WHILE YOU'RE out seeking wine-treasures for your cellar, here is a California postscript on Cabernet Sauvignon. Just released from Buena Vista Vineyards, the venerated cellars of Agoston Haraszthy in Sonoma, is a fifth-leaf wine from young vines of the Carneros region, often thought to be too cool, too near the upper inlets of the San Francisco Bay for Cabernet. But it is a deep-piled velour of a wine, a 1974 vintage made by winemaster Rene Lacasia, certain to grow into a stature capable of matching a Chateau Cheval Blanc of Saint-Emilion of Cabernet franc pedigree. It is currently priced at $5.99.

Fair directors have reported record-breaking entries in just about all categories, including 4-H and FFA livestock competitions, horse shows and rodeo events.

Country Western singer Eddie Rabbitt will top opening day festivities with performances at 7 and 9:30 p.m. in the Entertainment Pavilion and Susan Ray, another popular singer and a regular on the television series Hee Haw, will perform Saturday night at 6:30 and 8:30. Her band will play at the western dance the same night.

Dances are also planned Friday and Sunday, with the Sunday dance honoring the Mexican-Americans and their role in the Salinas Valley's economy and lifestyle.

The Fat Stock Auction, which brings top prices for 4-H and FFA livestock exhibitors, is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

A new Maid of Monterey County will be chosen Saturday night from one of nine contestants.

A demonstration of the Orff-Schulwerk and Suzuki methods of teaching music will be presented by the Monterey Peninsula Community School of Music Saturday, May 13, at the Santa Catalina School science lecture hall, Mark Thomas Drive, Monterey. The free program begins at 11 a.m.

The Orff method, based on speech patterns, teaches rhythm through clasping, stamping, body-slapping and percussion instruments. The Suzuki method aims to teach pupils music in much the same way they learn to speak.

Joe Fioretti and Jacquelyn Corina, who use the methods in their classes, will lead the demonstrations.

A short history of Chamber Society

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

IN A RECENT news release, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. said it will be a "sad day" for the arts if the Legislature follows the "accountant's advice" and cuts $1.5 million from the California Arts Council budget.

"Art is not just measured in dollars and cents. It's a matter of human spirit," Brown said. "If we were to analyze Kennedy's budget, we would never have gone to the moon. If we were to analyze the budget of Van Gogh or Leonardo da Vinci, they wouldn't have been able to do anything, because the cost-benefit analysis has a very difficult time when it comes to the intangibles of artistic expression." Brown said he expects to propose even bigger Arts Council budgets in future years, but that now "we are fighting off a reduction."

This statement emphasizes the spreading realization that the cultural enrichment of the community can no longer be handled only by private enterprise. Throughout the nation more states, counties and cities have included cultural programing in their fiscal budgeting.

The most audience-oriented opera companies, ballet troupes and musical organizations must have additional support to produce a season of works. Countries have always subsidized the arts and even in these times of economic stress continue to appropriate funds for the arts as a regular part of the budget.

Sunset Views

IN THE EARLY 1950s Gilbert Boyer organized a group to play chamber music. At first, they gathered at Mr. Boyer's home and neighbors were invited to listen. Soon there were too many in the audience to be accommodated in the Boyer living room and the programs were moved to the Crafts Center on San Carlos. The commitment to do regular programs proved to be too much for many of the musicians involved and this charming interlude of music faded from the scene.

In the late '60s these energetic people met again but organized a board of directors to prepare policy and programing. The Chamber Music Society continued to use local, but more professional musicians. This time they played at what was the Wells Fargo Bank on Dolores. When area residents discovered this rare musical treat, the audiences again outgrew their surroundings and soon a move to the Sunset Center, which by this time had been purchased by the City of Carmel, became necessary. At first, the programs and audience were accommodated on the stage in a unique intimate atmosphere but the audience continued to grow, and Angie Machado devised a plan to maintain intimacy and yet provide needed space. The illusion of an intimate gathering place was created from the huge expanse of theater seats by arranging screens of red flannel to enclose several sections of seats near the raised performance platform. In Peninsula musical circles, the story of this creation of a "chamber" within the theater has come to be known as "Angie's Red Flannels."

The Chamber Music Society has two purposes now: to provide intimate concerts in the chamber music repertoire of all periods and to stimulate young artists by annual awards to chamber music ensemble players under the age of 25. There are many prizes offered to individual musicians, but in California the Chamber Music Society is one of two organizations to offer a prize to an ensemble.

This year the awards auditions are being held at Sunset Theater Saturday, May 13, and winners will be presented in concert Sunday, May 14, at 3 p.m.

IN THE MID '60s, Carmel Unified School District presented its first full-scale musical, Finian's Rainbow. Staged at Sunset Theater, it featured a full cast of junior high performers with a single exception, that of the male lead, Woody Mahoney. "Woody" was played by a guest actor from Monterey Peninsula College, Lann Eyre. This year, the original production team—Diana Hardy, drama instructor at Carmel High School, and William Purdy, Carmel School District music instructor—decided to revive the play. This time the cast is from Carmel High School with one exception—Woody Mahoney. Guesting in the role will be Tom Allen, an MPC actor familiar to some Peninsulans as a "western Onion" man. As before, several of the lead roles will be double-cast.

The Finian's Rainbow revival will play May 18, 19, 20 and 21 at Sunset Theater.

Supervisors set planning priorities

Zoning and Master Plan revisions from the Cachagua area through Carmel Valley to the coast near Carmel have been assigned some of the top priorities among county planning projects by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Recommendations of the priorities were presented to the supervisors last week by Planning Director Ed DeMars.

The local coastal program was ranked second among priority projects for the county next year. Land use planning in this program includes the Hatton Canyon-Point Lobos area around Carmel, the Del Monte Forest plan and an overall coastal area plan.

Third-ranking project is zoning in Cachagua, where residential development has been accelerating the past few years. Updating the Carmel Valley Master Plan is ranked sixth. The local Master Plan study committee expects to finish its work next month. The revised Master Plan would then face hearings before the planning commission and board of supervisors prior to adoption.

Scenic highway studies are ranked 13th among priorities. DeMars noted in his report to the board that Carmel Valley Road "should be designated as (an) official county scenic road in the near future."

Determining spheres of influence, such as that of Carmel over the unincorporated area outside the city limits, is ranked 14th on the priority list.

Top priority for the county next year will be a review and revision of the Monterey County General Plan. Supervisors Edwin Norris and Michal Moore are working with Planning Commissioner William Peters of Carmel Valley to reach a board policy statement on growth management in the county. DeMars said that policy should precede any work on the county general plan.

Worst allergy season since '76 seen by doctor

By JIM BARRETT

SPRING SHOWERS, falling later and more heavily than usual, have kept thousands of allergies in check. But the respite is over and those devilish tassels and seed pods that make many of us miserable are in full bloom.

So if you already are greeting spring with a damp rumpled hankie and a string of convulsive "atchoos," things are going to get worse before they get better.

We are in for the worst allergy season in two years, according to Dr. Jeffrey M. Lehr, an allergist from Carmel.

"With the onslaught of rain, more seeds

Carmel Pine Cone

are released by the plants and seeds are pollen. For the last two years, we have been in a drought and although there has been pollen in the air, it was hardly as much as we will have this season," he said.

"Plants and trees are healthier and the grasses are growing," Dr. Lehr added.

ALL OF THIS is bad news to the allergy or hay fever sufferer. It causes the sneezing and wheezing, the watery eyes and itchy ears, the coughing and stuffy noses.

The odds of aggravating a spring allergy is greater if you live in a valley; less if you live by the sea. Carmel Valley, for example, has earned the dubious distinction of being known as "the allergy capital of California." Right now, the Valley is approaching full bloom. Only the late spring showers have slowed the spread of pollen.

Each individual is susceptible to certain types of pollens, Dr. Lehr said. Research is beginning to show allergies are a genetic trait inherited at birth, he said. So curse granddad because there is little you can do to prevent the misery spring can bring.

"Stay indoors during sunny, windy days. Use a pill—an antihistimine or a decongestant," advised the doctor. Warmth causes pollen to be released and wind, of course, spreads it.

IN THE VALLEY, he said, there are at least nine types of trees that can aggravate an allergy. They include the cottonwoods along the river as well as the elms, oaks, maples and acacias.

Their blooms soon will fall, but that only means it's time for the grasses to pollinate. "They generally start in April and continue until July, but that period is coming a bit later this year because of the rain," Dr. Lehr said.

Finally, the weeds begin to spread their seed in July. "That can last until late September," he said.

There is little or no escape from weeds and grasses. Said Dr. Lehr, "Grass seed has been known to blow from as far away as 50 miles."

The anatomy of an allergy is relatively simple.

"When a person inhales air, he also inhales pollen. Cells in the body release what are called histimines on contact," Dr. Lehr explained.

"Without getting too technical," he added, "they are the chemicals which cause allergic reactions. Blame them for everything from the sneezing to the wheezing to the itching, watery eyes."

BE THANKFUL there are over-the-counter medicines that reduce the miseries of a spring allergy, says Dr. Jeffrey M. Lehr, an allergist from Carmel. He predicts that this will be the worst allergy season in two years. Windy, sunny days will be the toughest for those with allergies and Dr. Lehr advises them to take an antihistimine to ease the discomfort. The doctor is not smiling because of the prospect of increased business. "I'm busy all year 'round as it is," he says. (Michael Stang photos)

MYRTLE GLYNN, a certified medical assistant, does the administrative work in the Carmel office of Dr. Donald Davidson. She is a former president of the Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the American Association of Medical Assistants. The organization has designated May 15 to 20 as National Medical Assistants Week.

Myrtle Glynn: Without her, doctor says, 'I'd go broke'

DOCTORS nationwide will be honoring the "forgotten people" in their offices next week. It is National Medical Assistants Week and no one knows their importance more than Dr. Donald Davidson of Carmel.

Myrtle Glynn is the administrative chief, cook and bottle washer in his office, which he shares with Dr. Donald H. Scanlon.

"Without her," he said, "I could still see patients, but I'd never get the bills out, never answer a phone call and never greet a patient. "I'd go broke," Dr. Davidson said frankly.

Mrs. Glynn, 54 and a medical assistant here for eight years, said her job is to do what few doctors and nurses can do—run an office.

"We are the only people trained to work in doctors offices," said Mrs. Glynn. "We are the forgotten people in the doctor's office."

National Medical Assistants Week begins next Wednesday. Mrs. Glynn, the sole Carmel member of the National Medical Assistants' Association, said she will join with other Peninsula medical assistants to mark the date at a luncheon Wednesday in Monterey.

The association, among other things, attempts to keep the assistants up to date on medical research. It sponsors symposiums on new techniques. "What good would it do if the doctor ordered a lab test and I had no idea what he was talking about?" Mrs. Glynn explained.

Not a union, the association was organized in California 24 years ago to bring recognition to medical assistants and help them improve in their jobs.

The local group received a shot in the arm when Carmel Mayor Gunnar Norberg and three other Peninsula city mayors recently signed a proclamation honoring them.

MRS. GLYNN performs a daily juggling act that combines medical, clerical and secretarial skills. She is trained to take X-rays, draw blood samples and give injections if needed.

"I'm the link between the patient and the doctor," she explained. She is one of the 11 certified medical assistants on the Peninsula. For certification, she had to pass a day-long written test from the national association. "I was the 824th in the nation to pass," she boasted. That was six years ago. More than 3,000 assistants are certified today.

A Pacific Grove resident, she has worked in doctors' offices for 15 years. She also has attended medical assistant courses at Monterey Peninsula College.

"Every time that phone rings, it could be an emergency," she said, pointing to a phone with a list of emergency numbers above it. "If the doctor isn't in, it's me who has to make the decisions," she said.

In those life-or-death situations, she usually will call an ambulance, notify the emergency room at Community Hospital and try to locate the doctor.

Most of the patients she works with are elderly Carmel residents. Some just come in to talk. Others forget their appointments and she calls to remind them. Mrs. Glynn might see 10 to 15 patients in a day and receive calls from another 25. Her job is to help them all.

"Some patients I've worked with for 10 years still call me nurse," she said.

Mrs. Glynn has three children and three grandchildren. Her husband is retired from the military.

State aid on the way

Second wind for recycling anticipated in Carmel area

EXPANDED RECYCLING on the Monterey Peninsula is planned for 1979 when funding under a new state law becomes available to finance the projects.

Ecology Action, a nonprofit organization founded in recent weeks, already is preparing plans for a full-service recycling center in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, more recycling drop-off points around the Peninsula and even curbside pickup of trash for recycling.

Carmel City Councilman Mike Brown, who started a glass recycling program three years ago, serves on the board of directors of the organization.

The impetus behind the renewed enthusiasm for recycling is Senate Bill 650, authored by State Senator John Nejedly (R-Walnut Creek) and signed into law by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in September.

The law charges new taxes on dump operators based on the tonnage they receive and also assesses retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers based on the number of employees and sales tax revenue generated.

Money raised by the assessments, which took effect last fall, goes for litter cleanup in parks, highway cleanup, public education programs and as grants to public or private agencies for recycling programs.

Susan Nolan, president of Ecology Action, believes the organization, working with the Monterey Peninsula Disposal District, has a good chance of getting a grant for recycling on the Peninsula. And she expects that Carmel recycling facilities could improve if the organization gets state funding.

The glass recycling operation begun by Carmel was later moved to the parking lot beside Brinton's Hardware on Carmel Rancho Boulevard. The center now handles glass, aluminum and cardboard, which can be dropped off at bins 24 hours a day.

The Carmel center is still one of the busiest on the Peninsula, according to Miss Nolan.

The Co-op Market in Pacific Grove has the most diversified community recycling operation. Marina also is doing a great deal of recycling, grossing $22,000 last year.

DISTRICT MANAGER Bill Parsons said most of the district profit from recycling has come from metals rather than paper, glass or aluminum. The district has banked $45,000 to $50,000 over the past four years from metal, while the other materials are "a break even proposition."

If virgin materials become more expensive to use, or there are "disincentives" put on using them, the market for recycled goods could improve considerably, he added.

But to get any long-lasting benefit from recycling, it would take a "total re-education" of the public not to throw away materials which can be reused, he said.

The disposal district probably will be the grant applicant, according to Parsons. It would coordinate planning with Ecology Action and the independent garbage collectors on the Peninsula to make the project work.

Ecology Action would handle public education programs and encourage community recycling efforts, he said. Garbage collectors would continue to pick up recycling materials, while the district would find a recycling site and handle shipment of materials to processors.

"We would stay out of the operational side," he said. "We just want to be a vehicle for getting grant funding."

Parsons already has discussed leasing property from the city of Monterey for a recycling center on some industrial zoned property the city owns on Highway 218 near Del Rey Oaks. This would keep the center closer to most of the Peninsula population than the Marina dump would be. The dump site would have the advantage of coming rent-free.

Miss Nolan said Ecology Action hopes to get a pilot project going, possibly in Pacific Grove, for curbside pickups of recycleables.

CARMEL IS SMALL enough for such a project, she said, but Brown noted the town isn't right for such a project because "the streets and sidewalks are not laid out here" for curbside collection.

Miss Nolan said there is a "demand for dropoff right here" in Carmel for recycling materials. She said she envisions "small containers" located every few blocks where people could take glass, metal and newspapers for recycling.

"These would not be huge bins," she averred. "They would be neat little redwood shelters, something you might put in a grocery store parking lot."

Ecology Action is working with the sanitary district and governments in all Peninsula cities to get their support for the recycling effort and to help plan it as an effective program.

Miss Nolan said recycling should become self-sufficient through the sale of recycleable materials. The Nejedly bill has a provision that money-making recycling operations convert state grants into long-term loans to be repaid out of profits.

Ecology Action is trying to get more public participation in Peninsula recycling efforts. Interested individuals may contact Miss Nolan at 394-4549 or Brown at 624-3790.

YOUTHS DECIDE CARMEL IS NOT IDEAL NIGHT SPOT

Eight San Jose youths threatened to hold their weekend booze parties somewhere else if they were not released when brought before Judge A. P. Fraser's bench after a wild Saturday night in an empty Carmel home.

Undaunted, the judge gave the host of the impromptu party a $50 fine or five days in the county jail.

After arriving late Saturday night, the four boys and four girls found an unoccupied house on Scenic Drive, jimmied open the windows and took advantage of the premises.

The host's excuse after pleading guilty was that he thought the house belonged to his father. "With the moon shining behind it, the house looked just like one that father once owned," he said.

However, his father has never owned a house or been in Carmel.

CARMEL PARENTS ASK FOR JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Carmel citizens petitioned the Monterey Union High School District for a junior high school, citing the need for a school nearer the students' homes.

If built, the village school would have about 100 pupils for grades seven through 10.

THE SERPENT CRAWLS CURB TO CURB (AN EDITORIAL)

The serpent crawled into Carmel's Garden of Eden at the council meeting last Monday night. Out from the files, where it had lain coiled, it came as a petition for paving.

Signed by a majority of property owners on San Carlos Street north, and backed by a second petition from property owners on San Carlos south to Eighth Street, it hissed demands for concrete "from curb to curb."

One more paved street—why should we worry? One by one the things which make Carmel a village go, and the ideals are lost forever.

CARMEL STUDENTS SOAR ABOVE NATIONAL AVERAGE

Sunset and Carmel High students scored above 95 per cent of the schools in the nation on the Iowa Tests of Educational Development.

In both schools, scores were highest in English grammar and vocabulary and lowest in mathematics (but still above state norms). This proves too, that at least for Carmel students, the dreaded English A exam should hold no terrors.

IN DEFENSE OF TOM'S CABIN

The Carmel City Council accepted Crescent Construction Company's bid of $5,943 Wednesday to remodel the old Episcopal Church that is now City Hall.

The church building is to be partitioned off so that there will be five additional offices and a better arrangement of the council room. The plan also appears to include removing cottages behind the building. One is occupied by Tom Hefling, a city worker for 21 years. The council wants to level the land where the cottages are and make a parking lot for the city officials' cars.

There are only three city officials with cars. In consideration of Tom's many years of service, thought should be given to leaving Tom's cabin standing.

The school will provide educational opportunities for 75 disadvantaged children.

The Interact Club, which is sponsored by Rotary International, raised $750. The Carmel Rotary Club, sparked by Interact Director Stuart Mitchell, voted to match the school's fund bringing the total to $1,500.

Five Youth Baseball teams in first-place struggle

By STEVE DONAHUE

BEFORE THE Carmel Youth Baseball season began, everyone agreed that just about any team had a shot at the Bronco League championship. After the first two weeks of competition, five of the six entries are still in hot contention for the first-half championship.

Sport Shop is leading the pack with a 4-1 record due to the outstanding pitching of Steven Read, Chris Meckel and Marcel Danko. Danko and Meckel also have been whacking opposing hurlers at a steady pace as they vie for the batting championship.

Pine Inn, the only team to beat Sport Shop, is tied for second with the ever-powerful Granite Rock nine. Wayne Marto's bat and the fine pitching of Chris Palma will give Sport Shop plenty to worry about as Pine Inn strives to repeat as league champions. Barry Jenkins, Brian Sosic and Javan Bernstein also are big contributors to the Pine Inn attack. Granite Rock has recovered from two losses in the first week of action with a perfect record last week dumping Pine Inn, 10-1, and stopping Derek Rayne, 12-7.

It is hard to name any one outstanding player on Granite Rock without mentioning the entire team, but the hitter most feared has to be Mike Kelly, who has teamed with Scott Siegrist to present opponents with a formidable attack. Tim Krebs, Mike Tehan and Phil Wang have been heavy contributors, too.

DEREK RAYNE wins the most unpredictable award of the young season as they have had both sensational and lackluster performances during the first two weeks. Highlights for Derek Rayne were their 6-1 drubbing of Pine Inn and pitcher Sean Ford's perfect game against La Playa. Mike White's hitting has been the plaque of opposing pitchers and they can now start to worry about Richie Smelzer who went four-for-four against La Playa.

Bob Agan, Ricky Han, Jim Wester and Bob Puccinelli are improving greatly with each game, which makes Derek Rayne a threat despite their 2-2 record.

John Roscelli Corp., last year's cellar dwellers, have come up with a potent attack for 1978. Their two victories during the first week of action exceeded their entire output last year. During last week's action, the roof fell in on Roscelli as both Adam Murray and Darren Donahue missed the Sport Shop game. Darren had the flu and was back on Saturday, but Adam will be lost for several weeks as he is travelling with his family. Roscelli dropped Saturday's contest to Pine Inn but not until the last inning. Joey DeRuosi, Brett Jackson and Craig Brinton were big producers for the Roscelli offense. La Playa is having a rough time this season and while they can't win the first half, opponents know that a healthy John Gill (he's recovering from a hand injury), together with a few breaks going their way, could find them at the opposite end of the standings before the second half ends. David and Scott Karcher, Sam Salerno, Carlos Zarate and Geoff Dow have had some fine moments and La Playa is definitely better than their 0-5 record indicates.

Pads sweep two games behind Sepersky's pitching

By JAY POSNER

STEVE Sepersky, Dave Carpenter and Seth Bernstein combined to give up only one run in 21 innings last week as the Carmel High Padres swept three games and moved into a first-place tie with Hollister High. Both clubs have 8-2 league records going into the final week of the season. The Padres hosted Gonzales Tuesday and they travel to RLS tomorrow.

Pitcher Sepersky defeated Palma, 4-0, and Pacific Grove, 3-1, as he raised his league record to 4-0 and his overall mark to 7-0. In winning those two games, Sepersky lowered his earned run average to 0.75. He has yielded only three earned runs in 28 league innings and only nine in 47 innings overall for a 1.34 ERA.

Against PG on Friday, the Padres scored all of their runs in the top of the fourth inning. Sepersky and Carpenter both walked and Mike Odello drove Sepersky home with a single to centerfield. Neil Vandervort followed with a single down the left field line to drive in Carpenter and the third run scored on a fielder's choice. The Breakers scored their only run in the bottom of the seventh inning on a single by Scott Graham.

In the game at King City on Thursday of last week, Carpenter and Bernstein combined for a shutout as the Padres routed the Mustangs, 13-0. Neil Vandervort was 4-4 and had four RBI's and John Francke also contributed three hits. Carpenter, who had two hits in the game, raised his pitching record to 5-1.

Against Palma on Tuesday of last week, the Padres scored their first run in the bottom of the first as Dave McKenzie reached base on a fielder's choice, stole second, moved to third on an error and scored on Carpenter's single. Carmel scored again in the fourth on a leadoff home run by Carpenter and they added two more in the fifth on a Neil Vandervort double, a sacrifice by Tom Frincke, Marc Bordonaro's fielder's choice and a passed ball. Sepersky allowed only four hits and struck out seven in the game.

In junior varsity action, the Padres remained in first place by winning two out of three games. Carmel defeated Palma by forfeit, lost to King City, 18-12, and edged Pacific Grove, 5-4. Against PG, Mike Wecker drove in the winning run and also recorded his third win of the year. In the game against King City, Mike Matson belted a home run while Buz Fulton took the loss.

K.C. upsets Carmel golfers

In golf play, King City upset Carmel 285-295 in MTAL play last week in King City. The loss dropped the first place Padres league record to 6-1 and their overall mark to 11-1. Medalist for the match was King City's Steve Silva with a one-under-par 42 for 12 holes.

King City (285)—Steve Silva 42, Mike Kinney 44, Ron Richardson 47, Kevin McVay 50, Todd Dahlen 51, Rick Walker 51.

Carmel (295)—Will Wilkinson 45, Mark Robertson 47, Curtis Jones 48, John Pirotte 50, Eric Borsting 52, James Shefik 53.

Sheriff candidate

Reginald Dewar hopes third time is the charm

REGINALD DEWAR of Big Sur hopes the third time is the charm in his bid to become sheriff of Monterey County. The self-employed public protection consultant twice challenged retiring Sheriff William Davenport and lost. Dewar now is one of four candidates for the post in the June 6 primary.

The only candidate who is not a professional law enforcement officer,

Second in a series

Dewar says "what I want to do is 180 degrees away" from the approaches of his opponents.

What Dewar proposes is increased citizen participation in setting department priorities for different regions of the county, regionalized police patrols to a greater degree than that at present and a concentration of limited department resources on major "victim" crimes.

He emphasized in an interview that the sheriff is much like the Secretary of Defense: a civilian in charge of a law enforcement agency.

"There is too much exclusion of the people who pay for the department," Dewar said. "Some feel that any intrusion of the citizen is a dilution of the sheriff's power. I don't. It's their department, there to protect and to serve them."

With that as a guiding principle, Dewar proposes local citizen advisory panels for areas such as Carmel Valley and Big Sur. These panels would consult with the sheriff on local problems, helping him develop programs to meet the local police needs.

Dewar also would like to restore and expand the resident deputy program. In Carmel Valley, Cachagua and other areas, the deputy would live in the community, work a 40-hour week and then be on call the rest of the time.

There still would be patrols by nonresident deputies, he added, and the officer would only get paid overtime for the off-duty hours he works.

DEWAR SAID by operating out of the three existing substations, deputy response times to crimes are "unacceptable." He also points out that the California Highway Patrol now has two resident officers in Big Sur and at least one for the past 13 years, with no problems for the individual.

"My goal is a resident deputy in each community," he said. "The resident deputy becomes a respected member of the community, not just a stranger in uniform. And it doesn't cost any more."

Dewar said he can help trim the nearly $300,000 budgeted by the department for overtime this year by establishing a sheriff's reserve program. The reserves, a carefully selected and trained group of volunteers ("not vigilantes," Dewar emphasizes), can supplement the regular patrol force in search and rescue operations and at other times when extra help is needed.

"This is one of the few counties in California that doesn't have a reserve program," he said.

Dewar also said he would eliminate the three assistant-sheriff posts instituted by Davenport—which he says enabled the incumbent to "retire in office the past two years."

He would revert to a single undersheriff, removing what he said is a layer of bureaucracy that "tends to further insulate and isolate the sheriff from the department he administers."

Eliminating the three positions could save about $85,000, Dewar estimated. He said there has been a "tremendous squandering" of money by the department and will work to cut costs while improving service with his community-oriented programs.

Dewar said he also hopes to cut overhead by making more use of "own recognizance" jail releases for individuals who "are no danger to themselves or society but who cannot make bail" for a variety of minor crimes.

He said this would save costs of running the jail and also aid poor families who might otherwise go on welfare if the breadwinner is jailed and thus cannot work.

Dewar said crime prevention would be a major emphasis of his administration.

Because he has been a consultant to police departments throughout the state, he said he is able to make suggestions for eliminating internal problems and proposing new approaches.

Crime priorities would be on victim crimes, he said, while non-victim crimes would receive a lower priority.

SPEAKING specifically about drugs, Dewar said he would press for investigation and arrest of drug pushers, but would not want personal drug use—whether it be marijuana or alcohol—to be a criminal justice matter. Personal drug abuse would be a medical matter, he added.

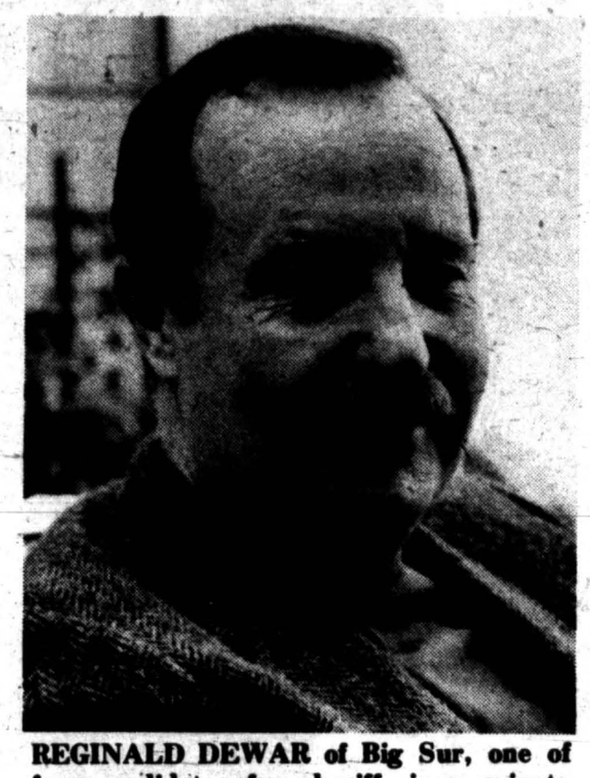
Dewar himself was arrested last fall for cultivation of marijuana, but all charges were thrown out by two different Superior Court judges because of improper search procedures.

"While it is not the type of advertising I would have chosen, it has been helpful in name recognition and in giving me a reputation for honesty," Dewar said.

Even with the arrest and his array of innovative programs, he does not believe he would have problems dealing with deputies in the department.

Dewar added that his crime prevention and community relations approaches offer deputies a new way to achieve their goals as policemen.

A U.S. Air Force veteran, Dewar, 48, has lived in Big Sur with his wife for 13 years. A graduate of the City College of San Francisco and the College of San Mateo, he also attended the UC Medical School in San Francisco and the Air Force military law school at March AFB.



REGINALD DEWAR of Big Sur, one of four candidates for sheriff, is a private consultant to police departments.

One early disclosure of campaign expenses

With campaign spending disclosures due at 5 p.m. today, only defeated Carmel City Council candidate Dorothea Roberts had filed early.

She reported spending $902. Of the total, $668 went for radio and newspaper advertising. An additional $200 was spent for campaign literature.

She reported no individual contributions of more than $50, the minimum amount where the source must be identified under the State Political Reform Act of 1974.

Statements from the remaining five candidates in the March 7 City Council races are due today. Committees formed to support the candidates also must disclose their incomes.

Mrs. Roberts, chairman of the Carmel Planning Commission, finished third behind incumbent Mike Brown and Howard Brunn in the race for two four-year council terms.

2-BR., OCEAN-VIEW CONDOMINIUM, $139,500

This is one of the few, almost new High Meadow condominiums that has a Point Lobos view. It has 2 bedrooms, 2 baths and an atrium. All rooms are large and the home is most attractive. It's a super value at $139,500.

MONTE REGIO 4-BR., 3-BATH AT $116,500

An ideal family home on an over-sized wooded lot in Monterey. It's walking distance to schools, tennis courts and downtown Monterey. It is fully updated and has a family room, darkroom, green house and two decks. An excellent value at $116,500.

OUTSTANDING 2-BR. & DEN, NEAR TOWN & BEACH

This is a really beautiful, older home that has been remodeled and decorated under the supervision of Beth Danysh. The house is on 2 lots and the easy-care garden is particularly attractive. The price is $225,000, and we're as enthusiastic about the value offered as we are about the quality and feeling of the home.

2 BDRMS., 60'x100' LOT, $119,500

This is a 30-year-old home that has not been extensively remodeled but has been well cared for, and you could move in tomorrow, it's that neat and clean. As well as giving extra space around the house, the 60' lot meets the main Carmel requirement for a guest house use permit. The house has over 1,000 sq. ft., beautiful pecan floors, and a detached, over-sized single garage with work space.

2 BRS., DEN, 2 BATHS NEAR BEACH, $215,000

This is a super, almost new, 2-story contemporary-style home on a dead-end street. It has a view of the beach, ocean, mountains and bird sanctuary. It also has some unique stained glass windows reflecting the moods of birdlife that you can see in reality THROUGH some of these same windows. The living room has a high, vaulted ceiling, the layout is free and open, the home has 3 decks, a large sauna, double garage with opener, and an almost indescribably good feeling about it.

ARCHITECT-DESIGNED PEBBLE BEACH HOME NEW, 4 BDRMS., 4½ BATHS, SPANISH STYLE

The architect of this remarkable, almost 4,000 sq. ft. home has captured the charm and feeling of some of those huge homes that were built in Pebble Beach in the 1920's. The big difference here is that you don't have plumbing about to wear out, 50 years of other people's dirt, and a kitchen designed for indentured servants. The house has 3 fireplaces, 2 Jenn-Aire units, dining room, family room, den, triple garage with three Genie openers and much, much more. The price is $750,000 and the location is terrific.

2 BRS., 2 BATHS, HANDLEY HILLS, $125,000

Looking for quality housing at a moderate price? You can't help but be impressed with this excellent 6-year-old home in an area of fine houses. The house has family room AND dining room, shake roof, double garage and a valley view. Solid value at $125,000.

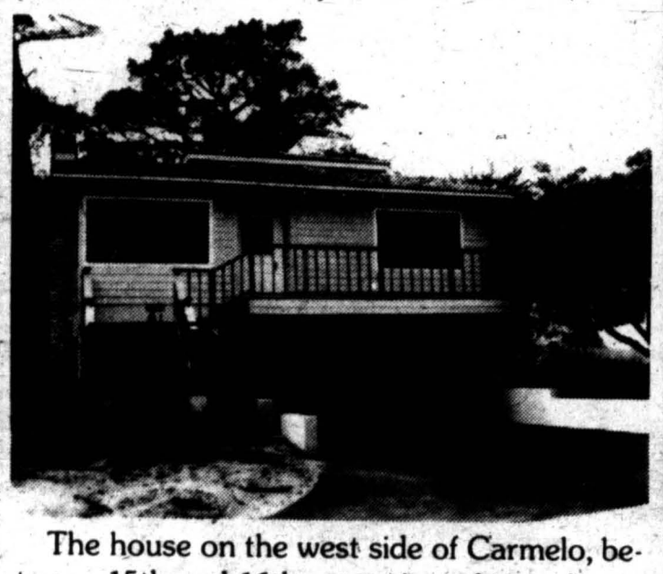
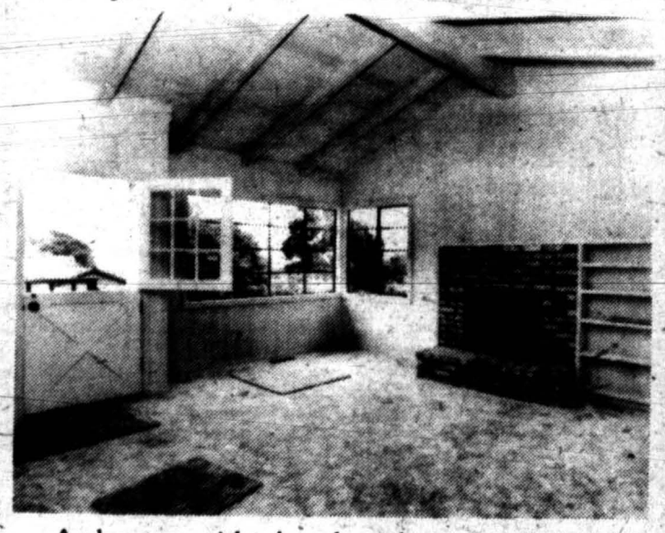
Unfolding House on Carmel Point

The classic walk, or latterly the jogging trail, around Carmel Point begins where Santa Lucia meets the sea, winds 'round the twists and turns of Scenic Drive, and loops back along Carmelo to Santa Lucia again. At every point, fresh beauties of sea and sky and mountain meet the eye, and the "feel" of the ocean is ever present.



The house on the west side of Carmelo, between 15th and 16th, occupies a favored spot along this track. From its elevated front balcony and the upstairs bedroom, you can see the mouth of the Valley, the green slopes of the Santa Lucia Mountains, a bit of Carmel Meadows, and the Carmel River as it enters the sea.

Inside, you step into a wood-panelled living room, with beamed ceiling, windows on 3 sides, and a brick fireplace at one end. Moving on, you pass through the dining room with a wall of windows opening to a private deck; the superbly equipped kitchen with ash cabinets, built-in appliances, and deeply recessed window above the sink; and finally to the utility room with more cabinets and plenty of space for washer and dryer.



A short corridor borders these rooms, and at either end is a large bedroom. Between them is the main floor bath with long, tiled counter, twin sinks, tub and shower. Off the corridor, doors open to two staircases. Going up, you reach the master bedroom, with windows embracing remarkable views. Its bath also has twin sinks, tub, shower and a private lavatory. This lofty suite is a secluded retreat, well away from the hustle and bustle.

The down staircase brings you to additional storage space, furnace and hot water tank, and the 2-car garage. Convenience is everywhere: Genie door to the garage, actually 45 double electric outlets, decks, baths and the kitchen, all designed for easy use. Carpeted throughout, except for kitchen and baths which are vinyl-tiled. And there's a convenient garden storage house at the rear.

Carmelo is one of Carmel's choicest locations— for schools, shopping, and gracious living. The house is brand new. Price is $185,000.

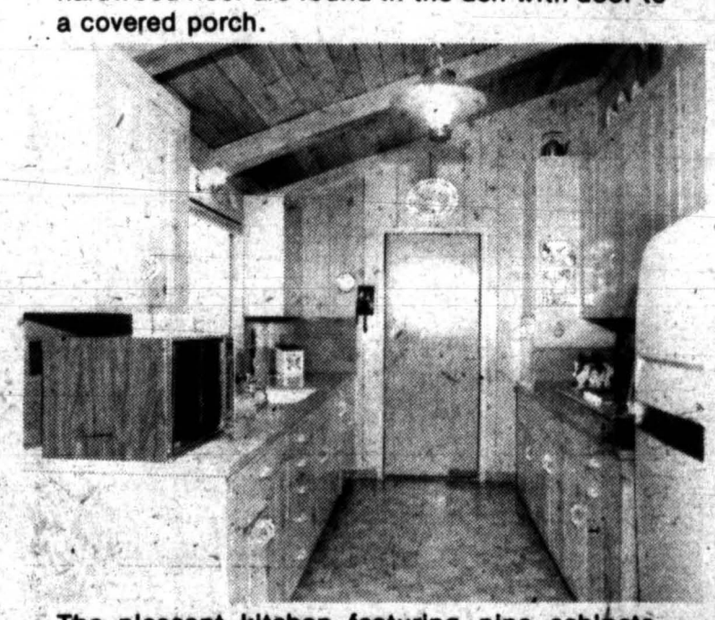
Carmel Woods Home with Point Lobos View

A never-ending joy is the view of Point Lobos and the ocean -- in sunshine, moonlight and at sunset -- from a well-built, very private, two-bedroom, two-bath home on a Carmel Woods hillside.

Extensive use of old brick in retaining walls, walkways and facade contribute distinctive character to this redwood, shake-roofed house set amid easy-care landscaping and with a sheltered, walled patio off a lovely lanai/study with wide window wall and planter boxes.

Rare heart of redwood paneling, brick fireplace, corner view window and beamed wood ceiling distinguish the handsome living room with dining ell. Wainscoting, paneling and pegged hardwood floor are found in the den with door to a covered porch.



The pleasant kitchen featuring pine cabinets, beamed wood ceiling, casement windows and wallpapered breakfast area, has an early American feeling which extends to the prettily papered, coved ceiling bedrooms. Walk-in closet, also bath with jacuzzi, are delights in the master suite, and an unexpected convenience is a clothes chute to the large downstairs sewing/projects/laundry room. $175,000.

Valley growth management next on Master Plan agenda

THE CARMEL VALLEY Master Plan committee tied up most loose ends in its reports on Thursday of last week, clearing the decks for major recommendations on growth management in the structure of the Valley.

Two different subcommittees—the socio-economic and growth management groups—will present reports for consideration beginning tonight at the Carmel Valley Manor. The meeting, open to the public, begins at 7:30 p.m.

Both subcommittees will offer growth management plans for the Valley which involve directing and limiting construction each year, and recommending the types of construction preferred.

The growth management subcommittee is considering a "Petaluma plan" approach, which assigns points for desirable development characteristics and allocates building permits using those criteria.

The socio-economic report, to be presented tonight, approaches growth management from the perspective of population density, available health care and other facilities, business activity, private income and public financing and other similar factors in the Valley.

Work on this section and the growth management report may take four or five weeks, William Peters, the committee chairman, estimated.

The group also will have to decide what specific recommendations it will make for development around Carmel Valley Village. Its land use subcommittee had been relying on an existing study report on the Village made in 1973. But Peters told the committee unless it adopts the report as a Master Plan revision, the Monterey County Planning Commission will have no guidance on plans for the community.

Dave Young of the planning department staff said the Village study was not incorporated into the existing Carmel Valley Master Plan. It was designed primarily to survey surplus commercial zoning.

The question of land use planning for the Village was raised by committee member Don Middleton. He called for some guidelines which would define and restrict the boundaries of the Village so there wouldn't be "the long, strung-out commercial development that the previous zoning permitted."

He said a project like the 25-unit Village Houses condominium proposal would set a boundary for commercial expansion and indicate the edge of the Village. The property at Ford and Carmel Valley Roads is zoned for planned commercial development with design control, but is referred to in the Village study as an area which also could be used for multiple-family residential use.

"We could put the excess commercial (zoning) in multi-family residential housing to help keep the Village the Village," Middleton said.

HE ALSO questioned what might happen to the Carmel Valley airstrip. According to Middleton, airport owner Peter Delfino is trying to sell the land. He said it was doubtful a new buyer would want to keep the property as an airport, particularly since it is zoned to permit four units per acre.

Jack Van Zander, who served on the land use subcommittee, suggested that the committee consider the airport land as a potential site for low-cost housing. Finding acceptable sites is proving to be an almost impossible task because of high land values in the Valley.

The committee accepted a final version of the recreation and parks report discussed at an earlier session. The report:

- Endorses using the Hatton Canyon Freeway right-of-way for riding, hiking and bicycling trails and closing the area to automobiles.
- Development of a barbecue, picnicking and group play park for Valley residents, preferably along the Carmel River.
- Development of active neighborhood recreation areas near the Village, Mid-Valley and the mouth of the Valley. The Little League park in the Village and school property off Robinson Canyon Road are suggested as two potential park sites.
- Easy access to trails and small neighborhood open areas or parks to minimize the need for car travel.
- Access to the north ridge line of the Valley in conjunction with a proposed Ridge Line Trail.
- Further parkland acquisitions in the Valley.

Senior citizens offered free home insulation

Does your home need insulation? Weather stripping? How would you like to have it done for free?

Well, if you are a senior citizen or handicapped person living in the Carmel area, the Monterey County Community Services Department might be able to help you.

The department has state funds to put in insulation, repair broken windows, add weather stripping and even install thermostats for about 110 homes countywide. It is asking for aid to service another 61 homes.

According to Richard Bennett, director of the department, the county is "almost caught up" with applications now in the office. He said the department is trying to find more individuals who could use the work.

"We're mainly spreading the information by word of mouth," he said.

Bennett said he believes there are "a lot of homes in Carmel that could use the help. With some of those single-wall homes, even if you fix a crack it could help."

Bennett said individuals who want the free assistance must meet low-income criteria. He noted that there are many persons in the area who would qualify, particularly long-term residents on fixed incomes.

Anyone whose income comes only from Social Security and SSI benefits will qualify, he said.

Bennett said information about the program is available by phoning the community services department in Seaside at 899-3774 or in Monterey at 375-0434.

While the program is open to all low-income families, it is aimed primarily at senior citizens and the handicapped, he said.
